Strata Title Loophole Used to Cut Lot Sizes

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Some Central Saanich developers and the municipality's own building inspector are using a loophole in the law to circumvent zoning and community plan intentions, Mayor Jean Butler said today.

The loophole enables them to place the lots under the Strata Titles Act and subdivide and sell them at below the size called for in the zoning.

The device to get the lots under the Strata Titles Act amounts to simply placing concrete blocks or pillars on the property and having them surveyed.

Mayor Butler mentioned Lisbon Holdings and Dr. Howard McDairmid, Dave Thomson and D. F. Hanley, all with land in the Mount Newton Crossroad area.

Zoning calls for lots not smaller than 10 acres in some cases and some of these have been sub-divided, using the Strata Titles Act loophole, down to lots of about 2½ acres.

"Out own building inspector, Norman Porter, is another who had taken this kind of action."

Residents in the Mount Newton area are "up in arms" about it and want it stopped, she said.

Wording in the act refers to "support structures" intended to be or to support a building foundation, said Gay Wheeler, assistant administrator in Central Saanich.

When these have been surveyed in on a lot, they enable it to be registered under the act and the sub-dividing to go ahead.

He said he understands the same sort of activity has been going on elsewhere in the province and the provincial government is concerned.

Mayor Butler said she met with Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis in Sidney Friday and while she didn't get a good reception, he promised to try to do something about it Monday. The provincial legislature resumes sitting that day.

Wheeler said there is one case in the municipality where a lot intended under the zoning to be a minimum five acres has been subdivided down to about half-acre lots.

Bloodhounds, Helicopters Tracking Ray

PETROS, Tenn. (AP) — Searchers using bloodhounds said today they had James Earl Ray, convicted assassin of Martin Luther King Jr., and four other convicts trapped and "going in circles" within five square miles of snake-infested mountain terrain near the prison they fled by ladder.

One of the convicts surrendered to authorities and searchers said they twice came within hearing or sight of the others but were unable to capture them.

Ray, serving a 99-year term, bolted over a wall of the maximum-security Brushy Mountain State Prison about 7 p.m. Friday. He used a ladder made of light pipe stolen from a workshop.

The FBI took charge of the case today, put Ray on its list of 10 Most Wanted Fugitives, and formally charged all the escapees with conspiring to violate a 1946 federal law against unlawful flight to avoid confinement. Additional charges were expected to be filed by Tennessee authorities.

State police, FBI agents and prison personnel manned roadblocks to seal off the area as about 150 law enforcement officials trudged through the thick underbrush on the steep terrain, where temperatures overnight fell to the low 50s.

Three helicopters probed the heavy foliage of the mountainous area with infrared equipment capable of detecting human body heat beneath the overgrowth.

State Corrections Commissioner Murray Henderson said the men were "pretty much going in circles. They just don't know the territory."

Meanwhile, Nashville lawyer Jack Kershaw, who is acting for Ray, said Ray's escape "is a total surprie to me."

"I talked with him this week and he indicated nothing of this nature. His plans were definitely oriented to a new trial with renewed confidence," Kershaw said. "This must have been an hysterical, spur-of-the-moment thing."

President Carter ordered Attorney-General Griffin Bell to give state officials whatever assistance he could and FBI Director Clarence Kelly personally ordered his agents into the case Friday night.

A seventh fugitive, shot by guards as he scaled the wall of the maximum security Brushby Mountain State Prison on a makeshift ladder, was recaptured immediately. He was treated at a hospital for what officers called a superficial gunshot wound.

Hotel Vancouver 'Hot'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Federation of Labor Friday placed a hot declaration on the Hotel Vancouver and announced an all-out campaign of support for the hotel's striking employees.

Four hundred and seventy-five members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers' Union walked off the job at noon Thursday to back demands for a wage increase.

The strike spread to a downtown laundry Friday as 10 pickets from the union protested the handling of their work by the non-union laundry.

Len Guy, secretary-treasurer of the federation, said Friday that the hotel management had refused to make any wage offer and was attempting to use strike-breakers to keep the hotel operating.

He said a meeting has been scheduled for Monday for staff representatives of all unions affiliated with the federation to plan strategy.

BULLETS THREATEN PIPELINE

FAIRBANKS (AP) — At least 50 bullets have been fired at the trans-Alaska oil pipeline and in at least two instances bullet dents have required the replacement of short segments of pipe, the Fairbanks News-miner reports.

The newspaper reported Friday there is no indication any of the bullets have pierced the half-inch steel pipe. Tests have shown a high-powered rifle bullet could pierce the line.

Engineers for Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., the consortium of eight oil companies building the $8 billion, 800-mile line from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez, say such an occurrence could endanger the marksman. They report oil pressure during pipeline operation will be such that a hole could release a needle-like stream of oil with enough force to injure or kill the shooter.

But a government pipeline monitor, noting one cutout was required hear an area used by sportsmen for target shooting, said, "the only way they're going to keep the pipe from getting holes in it is to armorplate it."

About half the line is built above the ground to protect delicate permafrost from the hot-oil line under stipulations of the Trans-Alaska Pipeline Authorization Act.

Happy Dutch hostage waves from car after her liberation by commandos from train

Troops Storm Gunmen, 8 Dead But 53 Freed

ASSEN (AP) — Dutch commandos backed by jet planes and armored cars stormed a train and school at dawn today and freed 53 hostages held for 20 days by South Moluccan gunmen. Two hostages and six of the 13 gunmen were killed.

The government said 12 persons—one terrorist, two commandos and nine hostages— were wounded.

All of those killed were aboard the train. A government spokesman said the hostages were killed when they sprang to their feet during a brief firefight.

Justice Minister Andreas van Agt said they were not killed by the troops, implying they were shot by the terrorists.

"There were indications about the health of the hostages that were so bad, and there was the risk that the situation would become even worse," Van Agt said. "We were also afraid of the increasingly harder attitude of the terrorists toward the hostages."

Premier Joop den Uyl told reporters the terrorists, demanding independence from Indonesia for their Pacific island homeland, had threatened the lives of the hostages several times since the hijackings began May 23.

The government gave no official account of the raid. But an officer who asked not to be identified said the raids began just before sunrise when five F104 jet planes thundered over the train, where most of the hostages were held.

While 35 marksmen opened up with covering fire and smoke bombs, 30 commandos sprang from nearby foxholes, blasted open the door of the train with plastic explosives and burst inside, subduing the Moluccans with bursts of automatic weapons fire.

N-BOMB BAN TALKS UNDERWAY

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The U.S. and the Soviet Union will begin discussions Monday in Washington on a possible agreement to ban all explosions of nuclear devices, the state department announced Friday.

President Jimmy Carter has made such an accord one of the priority arms control goals of his administration.

According to U.S. officials, despite the strains in over-all Soviet-U.S. relations, the Soviet side has been receptive to seeking an agreement on banning all nuclear explosions.

They also stressed that discussions in this field have been going on for many years and have remained immune from the general atmosphere in relations, although major progress in the talks would of course be translated as a sign of improved ties.

Quebec 'Softens' French

Times News Services.

QUEBEC CITY — Businesses in Quebec with 100 employees or more will have four to six years to obtain government certificates proving that French is used in their operations.

And three-year temporary certificates will be issued to business firms once they begin a "francization" program, Cultural Development Minister Camille Laurin told the National Assembly Friday in tabling regulations for Bill One, the PQ government's proposed language legislation.

Laurin described the regulations as "a softening" of the rules governing Quebec's current language law, Bill 22, which was passed by the former Liberal government in 1974.

He said the temporary certificates will be for a three-year period rather than for the present two.

Under Bill One, businesses may lose their operation permits if they fail to obtain "francization" certificates attesting that French is the language of work in their internal communications, manuals and advertising.

Meanwhile, Quebec's Chambre de commerce said in a 200-page report that the province would suffer major economic losses in terms of jobs, revenues, growth and investment if the language charter is adopted as it now stands. However, if certain clauses in the charter are amended it is possible to offset the losses without affecting the aims of the bill.

Unless relatively unimportant changes are made to the charter companies will continue leaving the province and thousands of Quebecers will be deprived of jobs, the authors say. Clauses in the language legislation forcing businesses in the province to make French their working language are alienating companies on which Quebec depends for its economic growth and development, they add.

Liquor Stores to Be Hit If Gov't Workers Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — For the first time since it was given full bargaining rights in 1974, the British Columbia Government Employees Union (BCGEU) says it will take an over-all strike vote this summer if it fails to get a master contract by July 31.

John Fryer, general-secretary for the union, said Friday that liquor board employees are likely the ones to strike while the rest of the 31,000-member union keeps them on full pay.

"We will be shutting down a target group ... that will be kept on full salary by assessing the others," said Fryer. "We will be picking on a group that will create maximum pressure."

Fryer, speaking on the eve of the BCGEU's biennial convention, said a shutdown of the liquor board will affect not only the average citizen, but also the hotel industry.

"It will be difficult for these bible-thumpers to rule them back to work," he said. "It's pretty hard to call the legislature back in and declare the liquor board essential."

Fryer said the union's bargaining proposals were "very, very modest," with the total package unlikely to exceed 10 per cent. He said the wage increase was not as important as the cost of living clause.

Priorities include job security and protection for employees transferred to and-or displaced by Crown corporations. This issue came to the fore with creation of the B.C. Ferry Corp., which dropped 500 employees, and the B.C. Building Corp., which may cost 800 to 900 civil servants their jobs.

The BCGEU also wants health and welfare benefits for casual workers, dental and extended medical plans for retired government employees, special occupational health and safety training for safety officers, a long term disability plan and paid education leave.

Executive Hikes Probed by AIB

OTTAWA (CP) — The Anti-Inflation Board is conducting "an informal investigation" into salary increases up to $60,000 won by top executives of some corporations, a board official said Friday.

The investigation was initiated after published deports said that while anti-inflation guides hold hourly-rated workers to a maximum annual increases of $2,400, some bosses, like the president of Kaiser Resources Ltd., took a pay raise of $60,363 last year.

L. C. Morrison, director-general of communications for the Anti-Inflation Board, said Friday in a telephone interview that the board's compensation branch is investigating some of the raises.

One of the problems the compensation branch faces is that it must consider as a group salary increases for corporate executives.

As long as the average salary increase of each member in the group does not exceed $2,400, the increase likely will be within the anti-inflation guides. This means that one executive might receive a pay raise of $5,000, for example, as long as other members of the group received token increases to keep the average to $2,400.

Also, Morrison said, many companies include cash or stock bonuses as part of executives' compensation. Some of these arrangements were entered into before the anti-inflation regulations came into effect in October, 1975, and they vary with the company's success. The board has to consider, in applying the guides, whether a company had a particularly bad year just before the guides came into effect, and decide upon the allowable amount of the bonus accordingly.

Among the big increases in 1976 reported were: a $17,250 increase for the president of Imperial Oil Ltd. to a salary of $251,600; a $20,000 increase to a salary of $370,833 for the president of Massey-Ferguson Ltd., and a jump of more than $22,000 to a salary of $55,000 for the president of Canadian Homestead Oil Ltd. of Calgary.

Trudeau Raps Black Double Standard

By FRANK RUTTER
Times London Bureau

LONDON — Prime Minister Trudeau Friday challenged black Africa to force a cutoff of oil supplies to Rhodesia, a move he said would topple the white supremacist regime quicker than any new sanctions.

"It is a puzzlement to me that some African nations, some of which are members of OPEC, haven't urged turning off the supply of oil to Rhodesia," Trudeau said at a press conference as the Commonwealth Conference here broke up for the weekend.

The black members have been pressing the Commonwealth to adopt tougher sanctions both against Rhodesia and South Africa.

The dominant theme of the Commonwealth conference here is race. There might be discussion of other things, but beneath the cosmetics the issue is skin color, and what that means in Africa.

Trudeau's comments were abrasive ones, as were subsequent remarks both inside and outside the conference.

He accused black Africans of using double standards in criticizing white mercenaries but not Cuban interveners. He threw in their face their complaints about Western multinational oil companies fuelling Ian Smith's armored cars and hunter jets, claiming that the black Africans had more leverage with their "friends" in OPEC, indeed some — like Nigeria — were members of it, in using oil as a weapon in Rhodesia.

Then he deliberately raised the issue of Uganda, which most others had tried to avoid, by insisting that the conference formally condemn President Idi Amin for mass murder. Black condemnations of Amin had been carefully phrased outside the conference, and some participants even complained that he should be in London.

All that he said might be true. It might also find hearty agreement from other white Commonwealth leaders, but they have not so far chosen to express themselves in that way.

New Zealand's Robert Muldoon, on the spot because his country plays games with South African athletes, declared himself fully behind the "Maputo declaration," a fiery document drawn up by the militant black nations in Mozambique last month.

Trudeau, in contrast, declared frankly that he had never read the Maputo declaration. He said cheerfully

RAPIDS SHOT IN BARREL

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Karel Soucek, 30, a Hamilton stuntman, successfully shot the Niagara River rapids in a barrel today.

After shooting the rapids, he spent about three hours trapped in a whirlpool, but was rescued by a helicopter.

Parks police stopped Soucek from attempting the same stunt last Tuesday.

Business, Labor Both Attack B.C.'s Own Controls Plan

The provincial government's three-point anti-inflation program is unworkable, labor and business leaders said Friday.

Under the program announced by finance minister Evan Wolfe B.C. will seet up a prices review board, establish a council of public sector employers to provide data on public service salaries and arrange a series of meetings between Premier Bill Bennett and leaders in labor and business.

Federation secretary-treasurer Len Guy said it is "ludicrous and outrageous for any provincial government to pretend that it can deal with inflation."

Guy said rapidly-rising prices for such things as petroleum products, coffee and citrus fruits are beyond provincial control.

He said the program is an attempt to encourage public employers to "do a number on their employees," adding that public employee unions have already made it clear that any stacking of controls against labor will be fought.

Bill Hamilton, president of the Employers' Council, said it is impractical for any one province to attempt to institute measures of economic control within its boundaries.

But he said the council welcomes the provincial initiative to meet with labor and management to strive for pay and price restraint after federal controls are lifted.

Bruce Pepper, managing director of the Vancouver Board of Trade, said Wolfe's program is too one-sided with controls on prices and not on wages.

John Fryer, general-secretary of the 35,000-member B.C. Government Employees Union, said Wolfe is quite wrong in suggesting that public service wages are higher than those in the private sector.

He said the minister didn't have any statistics, adding that "it's part of the tendency to make public employees the scapegoats of inflation."

Ray Mercer, the regional direcotr for the Canadian Union of Public Employees, with 15,000 members in B.C., said the government wants to kill collective bargaining for public employees in the province and called the program a "declaration of war" against the public sector.

Bill Broadley, president of the B.C. Teachers' Federation, said there is suspicion in the 23,000-member BCTF that part of the government plan is to force teachers into province wide bargaining, eliminating negotiations at the school district level.

Holland Hostages Freed

south, an armored car slammed into the brick wall of the village school at Bovensmilde, where four hostages were being held.

Troops poured from the vehicle and raced into the one-storey building. After a brief burst of automatic fire, four male Moluccans, barechested and in pyjamas, emerged from the building with their hands bound behind their backs.

Dutch reporters in Bovensmilde said someone fired at the troops from the Moluccan neighborhood near the school, but police refused to confirm or deny the report.

A correspondent for the Amsterdam newspaper Het Parool wrote, "bullets were flying around our ears. We had to look for cover."

The gunmen were driven away in police wagons, while the troops, waving two-finger "V for Victory" signs, rode off in their armored cars. The hostages were taken to Groningen for medical examinations and reunions with their families, and were not immediately available to reporters.

"We expected this action in the long run," said Margiet Wiegers, 19, whose sister, Janneke, 21, was one of the hostages. "If it had not taken place, Holland would not have been a democratic state."

The terrorists, who also sought freedom for 21 jailed comrades and safe passage from the country, took 150 hostages in simultaneous raid on the school and train on May 23.

Trudeau

that he didn't think there was much difference between Canadian and New Zealand sporting policies.

He made fun of Idi Amin, saying while he wasn't afraid of him he wouldn't like to sit next to him.

How it will go down during the weekend's pause for reflection and for private consultations remains to be seen.

Trudeau might be ignored. Or he might stimulate more bitterness and invective. The third possibility is that he might be heeded, even if only on his best debating point which is the curtailment of oil supplies to Rhodesia.

The extent to which this Commonwealth conference will go in espousing liberation of Africa's black majorities is not yet clear.

But it is clear that the issue is supremely potent, and that other Commonwealth problems not even indirectly connected, such as Cyprus, just to name one, are likely to be virtually ignored in the final communique.

And the drift is clear. It's amazing what men will do when they are staring down gun barrels.

The first major concession is the agreement by all—even, in this instance, Trudeau—that the armed conflict under way must continue if freedom is to prevail.

Two years ago, at the last conference, it was agreed that if something wasn't done about Southern Africa, there would be fighting.

Now there is fighting. Presumably the Commonwealth will have to come up with a better conclusion than that fighting will get worse.

Regional Board Won't Pay For Proper Parks Survey

In the beginning, it was to be a simple parks survey — and that's the way it's going to be in the end.

In between, it blossomed into such a chore that UVic geography professor Mike Edgell, who earlier this year volunteered to organize it, thought he should be paid something.

He suggested in a letter dealt with by the parks committee of the regional board Thursday that $2,400 would be reasonable to cover 32 days of anticipated work.

Despite being told that was about one-quarter of a consultant's usual fee, the committee delivered an emphatic no.

Please carry on as a volunteer, members said in effect.

Edgell, who said today he has yet to hear from the committee or regional parks staff, added the decision will mean he will cut back his contribution from two days a week to probably one day in two weeks.

The survey was to measure what regional parks had to offer in terms of flora, fauna and topography, what people now used them for and what they wanted to see done with them in future.

"It's basic information the regional board should have got a long time ago," he said. Results could produce both educational material and data for planning such things as trails and picnic sites.

At first Edgell envisaged using perhaps two graduate students but 10 students were hired by the region with their wages to be paid by the Young Canada works program.

Designing the research took eight days of his time.

True, he volunteered originally with no thought of any remuneration, he said.

"But the thing just snowballed. There's just no way I can do it."

Price Climb Unites Tories, NDP Against Controls

BROADBENT

By VIC PARSONS.

OTTAWA (CP) — A new surge in the cost of living in May prompted renewed calls Friday from opposition MPs for an end to the government's wage-and-price controls.

Both Progressive Conservative and New Democratic Party spokesmen, reacting to Statistics Canada figures showing an eight-tenths of one per cent rise in consumer prices last month, said the program should be ended because it is not working and is having adverse effects on the economy.

The federal agency's consumer price index — which is the most-frequently-used measure of inflation — showed that food prices, rising by 1.4 per cent in May, were responsible for half the increase.

Sinclair Stevens, Conservative finance critic, said his party, on the basis of May's figures, had presented a special petition to Commons Speaker James Jerome Friday morning with a motion calling for an end to controls June 30.

The petition, circulated among Conservative MPs in the last week in March but delayed first because of the government's budget and then by its green paper on controls, must be debated within 15 days. Both Stevens and Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said the three-day debate could come as early as Monday.

If the motion is approved — unlikely because of the Liberal majority in the Commons — the program could indeed end June 30. Ed Broadbent, the New Democratic Party leader, said he would support the Conservative motion.

Stevens said it was apparent, in the light of the May figures, that controls are not effective in controlling inflation and are also a severe deterrent to economic growth required to create jobs.

Broadbent said in the Commons that because wages and salaries are being held down below six per cent under the controls and the inflation rate for the year has been higher than that, employees would find a decrease in real terms in their take-home pay this year.

At the same time, prices of gasoline and home-heating fuel and housing — both of which could be controlled by government — are increasing at rates of more than 10 per cent, he noted.

In the last year, fuel and utility prices have risen by 15.8 per cent.

Stevens suggested that when controls end, the government should set targets on acceptable levels of increase in both wages and prices.

Goals should also be set for economic growth and job creation, he said, along with limits on the proportion of the economy to be taken by various levels of government.

The Anti-Inflation Board should be disbanded, he said, but price and wage developments should continue to be monitored by the consumer and corporate affairs department.

Stevens suggested that for a period of six to 12 months after decontrol, the 200 largest companies in the country should be required to give the cabinet 30 days notice of any price increases. A similar 30-day delay should be required before implementation of contracts of employees working for those firms.

Broadbent suggested the government should act directly to control energy price increases and mortgages to slow down inflation in those sectors.

He said he believed a majority of the public had a vague idea now that controls are good. But when they find later this year that prices are going up and incomes are being held down, they will see the injustice of the program.

Since last November, when the index registered its lowest 12-month inflation rate since early 1973 at 5.6 per cent, there has been a resurgence in the cost of living.

In May, the 12-month inflation rate was 7.6 per cent, the same as April.

Farmers Reject Gov't Food Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Agriculture rejected the government's long-awaited national food policy immediately after it was unveiled Friday.

The CFA, representing more than 300,000 farmers, called the report, A Food Strategy for Canada, imprecise and having little to do with farmers.

Consumer Affairs Minister Tony Abbott and Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said the report is only a general guide for development of a food strategy for the future.

Friday's food policy announcement says marketing boards will continue to function but that the representation will be balanced out to ensure that views of producers, processors and consumers are adequately represented.

This was hit by the CFA which said in a release it appears the government is becoming "technocratically occupied in insisting that priority be given to the seating of non-farm sector 'experts' . . . at the expense of farmers."

Whelan told news conference that although he believed in marketing boards and thought that farmers had to be protected from fluctuations in prices, he did not believe in supporting inefficient producers.

"I don't believe in a welfare system for agriculture," he said.

Whelan listed the following measures the government considers important in helping farmers:

— The development of an effective system of temporary safeguards to protect domestic markets from extreme fluctuations in world prices.

— Identifying food commodities that might require long-term protection through tariff protection.

— Negotiation of better access to foreign markets for products in which Canada has a competitive advangage.

— Provision of more protection to producers from such things as crop failure and disease through such things as crop insurance.

From the British Royal Mint

For only the fourth time in over 1,000 years...

The Obverse shows Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II on the Coronation Throne wearing the Coronation Crown holding the twin sceptres of rule.

IN 22 carat gold.

For only the fourth time in the over 1000 year history of the British monarchy, the British Royal Mint will strike a unique and magnificent, official gold Medallion to commemorate a sovereign's Jubilee. The only two previous monarchs commemorated were Queen Victoria, for her Gold and Diamond Jubilees, and King George V for his Silver Jubilee. Now, this exceptional mintage commemorates the first quarter century of the reign of Queen Elizabeth II.

All Medallions are 22 carat gold and multiple-struck by the Mint for a distinctive Matte Proof finish. The Issue is in two sizes:

The Grand Size — 57mm (2¼") in diameter, 152 grams, 4.87 troy oz.
The Standard Size — 44mm (1¾") in diameter, 90 grams, 2.90 troy oz.

This historic Issue is distinguished in 7 important ways

1. So Limited:—A maximum of only 1000 Medallions of each size will be minted for the entire world. Only 500 of each size are allocated for all North America. A strictly limited number of both sizes are reserved for issue as "matched sets".

2. So Unique:—All Medallions are struck to order and individually numbered. Each Medallion is stamped with five distinctive Hallmarks.

Five Distinctive Hallmarks Stamped on the Rim (Edge)

3. So Special:—Each Medallion is individually assayed by the London Goldsmith Co. and bears its Hallmark attesting to the 91.6 "fineness" of the gold content.

4. So Authentic:—Each owner receives an official Royal Mint "Certificate of Authenticity" with his name and Medallion number written in by hand.

5. So Historic:—Each owner will be officially invited by the Royal Mint to attend and witness an historic ceremony (date to be announced) at which the dies of these unique Medallions are forever destroyed.

6. So Valuable:—Each Medallion's gold bullion content alone, is worth approximately half the purchase price (international gold market rates as of the date of this writing). And, this does not even begin to take into account the enormous numismatic/collector value of this extraordinary Issue.

7. So Rare:—Since this is only the fourth gold Medallion of its kind in over 1000 years, substantial demand worldwide is anticipated from knowledgeable collectors—thus, "Reservations" can only be accepted subject to Medallions still being available as of receipt of the application.

Available exclusively from Charlton International Official Agents to the Royal Mint for this Issue

Applicants may make reservation to examine these historic gold Medallions through Charlton International, Canada's leading numismatic dealer (Bank: Bank of Montreal.) As Medallions are struck to order by the Royal Mint in Britain, applicants will be informed of proposed delivery dates after our receipt of the below, "Reservation Application".

Purchase is strictly limited to only one Medallion — or to one "matched set" of the two sizes. (Both Medallions in a "matched set" will have the same number.) All Medallions come in a distinguished Royal Mint Presentation Case.

30 Day Examination Guarantee

Applicants will be assigned a priority number in order of the receipt of their "Reservation". Thus, parties making the earliest reservation have both the best assurance of supply and possibility of acquiring the Medallions stamped with the lowest number.

Purchasers may examine the gold Medallions for 30 days and have the right to return the Medallion for a complete refund.

An Election of Losers

The return of a Conservative minority government in Ontario represents a serious defeat for Premier Bill Davis which could play a major role in shaping Canadian politics for years to come. In failing to gain the majority he desperately sought, Davis has damaged his own credibility as a political leader, weakened the Conservative party stronghold in Ontario and inadvertently rejuvenated a Liberal party many pundits said was on its last legs. More importantly, perhaps, he may have saved federal Tory leader Joe Clark from the ignominious fate of being deposed as leader before fighting his first election.

As in many elections, the numbers do not tell the tale in Thursday's vote. While gaining seven seats to a total of 58, Davis was the big loser. The voters, it seems, saw through his transparent excuses for the unnecessary election and demonstrated their resentment by maintaining a minority situation most believed had been providing good government for the last 21 months. Unless his government is defeated in the legislature, it is now politically impossible for the premier to go to the people again for at least three years. Until that time, Davis is stuck with the flimsy power base he has been finding so distasteful.

On the national scene, the unfortunate bumbler Clark gets a reprieve. The scenario outlined recently by former premier W. A. C. Bennett — whereby Davis obtains a resounding majority, steps down as Ontario premier and sandbags Clark for the federal leadership — has been a popular theme for some time, even in the Tory caucus offices on Parliament Hill. After Thursday's vote, all this becomes wishful thinking. A premier who twice fails to get a majority in a traditionally Tory province can never be the great hope of the Conservative party. Certainly, Davis would be in no position to take on the ever-growing popularity of Prime Minister Trudeau.

For the Ontario New Democratic Party the election results came as a severe if not totally unexpected disappointment. In dropping five seats from its 1975 high of 38, the NDP has lost its position as official opposition and allowed Ontario politics to swing back to the usual Conservative-Liberal battle. In Ontario, where the elevation of the NDP in 1975 was regarded as something of a fluke, this is not necessarily a major defeat, but it must raise questions about the leadership of Stephen Lewis. Few political leaders get more than three tries at government before being shouldered aside.

Surprisingly, the big winner in this election was the Liberal Party, which lost two seats, and its leader, Stuart Smith. Written off as a fumbling egghead, the odd man out, the Woody Allen of Ontario politics, Smith managed to return the Liberals to official opposition, squeaking past the NDP by one seat. For a man who was, with his party, dismissed entirely by many observers, this was a major victory.

By and large, this was an election of losers, an event where even the winners came up empty-handed. Davis managed to darken his own image and dash his hopes for national stardom. Lewis managed to lose his party the only position of power it has ever held in Ontario. Smith managed to claim victory only by saving his party from self-destruction. The biggest loser of them all, however, was the Ontario taxpayer. For $20 million, he was force-fed an election he did not want and did not need. For that insult, Davis and his cynical colleagues will now pay the penalty.

A Tasteless Economy

There are apparently no limits to the accountant mentality of the Social Credit government even when it comes to matters of basic respect and taste. The plan now in the works to build a barbecue patio with the gravestones of children who died at Woodlands school in New Westminster is not a cruel joke — it is a serious proposal aimed at saving money. In cash terms, it may make sense. In moral terms, the cost is too high.

According to a human resources department spokesman, the stones were moved when it became known that rooms in the new Queens Park extended care hospital under construction would overlook the graveyard. Relatives of the children gave their approval for the move and a new cairn is to be erected in memory of the children. This much is acceptable. The plan to turn the children's names into the dirt and make a patio of the headstones is not. While it will not bother the dead, in this society we maintain a propriety and respect in this area which the government is threatening to ignore. The alternative has already been detailed by the human resources department spokesman, who said the stones could be either included in the patio or crushed. The choice should be clear, even if it means rewriting the government's bottom line.

Uncle Billy's Ghostly Tale

Does anybody ever tell ghost stories any more? What a spooky thrill it used to be to huddle round a bonfire on the beach, or before an open fireplace in a darkened room, and hear a voice begin: "It was a dark and stormy night . . ." Little boy listeners weren't the only ones who snuggled closer to someone for reassurance.

It usually began with tales of poltergeists and weird apparitions, of women with second sight and of strange premonitions which became all too true.

Some of the story-tellers were real spellbinders as they worked up the scale. You heard about the girl who took a dare to spend the night alone in a haunted house and came out in the morning gibbering and bereft of reason.

You saw the staring eyes, heard the creaking of doors and the drumming of ghostly hoof-beats, almost felt the clammy touch of nameless creatures moaning in the dark.

Then crash! Some prankster draped in a white sheet would hurl himself upon us with a screech intended to be blood-curdling, dissolving the awestruck group into a tumble of giggling figures, halfway between relief and disappointment.

Lively Curiosity

My father, who was a Church of England clergyman of straightforward views, disapproved of this "tampering with the unknown," as he called it. He believed that there are good forces and evil forces in the world and the latter are better kept locked up in whatever void they inhabit.

He didn't forbid ghost stories but he feared that they created a morbid interest which could lead to worse things. Once when he came home and found me and some friends bent over a ouija board, or planchette — under our touch it glided about spelling out messages ostensibly from the spirit world — he sent it flying with a kick that would have done credit to a rugby fullback. As I said, his approach to things was straightforward.

The attitude of my great-uncle by marriage, Judge Spinks, was the complete reverse. Uncle Billy had a lively curiosity about the supernatural. He fed it with writings by people like Sir Oliver Lodge and by endless conversations with friends who had similar interests.

He was too discreet to debate the subject with my father, to whom he was greatly attracted although they could hardly have been more different in their intellectual responses. He often pressed Dad to come and stay with him in Victoria, to give him a break from his labors on the mainland, where he had a large, sparsely-populated parish served by muddy roads and plank sidewalks.

The invitations were rarely accepted. Such visits as there were often ended sooner than expected. Dad chafed under a life of idleness. He wanted to get back to his garden and to those long walks to call on his scattered parishioners, walks on which he could pursue uninterrupted his cheerful dialogue with the Lord.

Uncle Billy and Aunt Margaret never came down to breakfast which meant that Dad, an early riser, was served his in solitude in the dining room a long time after he was up and dressed. He was seated in my Aunt Margaret's usual place, with instructions to summon replacements from the kitchen by touching with his foot the bell button concealed under the carpet.

It was one thing for practised Aunt Margaret to find the button with her thin-soled slipper, another for my father to detect it with his country clod-hoppers. I don't think he ever went back after Annie the maid, who looked not unlike the late Queen Mary, entered the dining-room to investigate a long silence and found him on all fours under the table, groping for that elusive button.

I often stayed with Aunt Margaret and Uncle Billy when I was a boy and so was introduced to a new type of ghost story. It wasn't the spine-chilling thriller I was accustomed to but a serious discussion among elderly gentlemen. Quite a different matter.

One of Uncle Billy's friends was a Mr. Sayward, a widower, who was keenly interested in psychic phenomena and spent large sums investigating them. He travelled to Paris (in those days a considerable adventure) to consult a medium who had the ability to produce ectoplasm, a materialization of the spirits from beyond.

Mr. Sayward had photographs of a dark fat woman from whose neck something swelled and rose like a cartoon balloon. Instead of writing the balloon contained shadows that might have been a person's features. His late wife? He believed so.

Uncle Billy was the hero of a story my Aunt Margaret told. When they lived in Pasadena, California, she had a telephone call one night from a friend whose daughter and son-in-law had gone sailing and were long overdue.

Spirits Real?

"Tell Judge Spinks to take a pencil in hand and clear his mind of everything but Marnie and George. Then tell me what he writes."

He wrote, she said, the name of a bay in Lower California where they were found with their wrecked boat. Uncle Billy did not deny the story. He was a judge so it must have been true.

When Aunt Margaret was gone from the room I shivered and said: "Uncle Billy, are there really spirits who can tell us things?"

His round, pink face, usually so jolly, grew solemn. He sighed. "I'm damned if I know, Stuart, and there's only one way I'm going to find out."

I didn't know then what he meant but I do now. Both he and my father are gone from the world we know. I hope they found the answers and were satisfied by them.

Now that I am growing old I sometimes think I sense the kindly presence of loved onces long since lost to mortal view . . . It's all right, Dad. I know it's just my imagination. All of them were good and gentle souls, and most of them were Anglicans.

An Accounting Dilemma

OTTAWA—Some of the federal officials involved in the attempt to make an economic assessment of the regional benefits of confederation have had great reservations about the entire exercise for several common-sense reasons.

One is as simple as the truth that where there is a winner there must also, somewhere else, be a loser. Over a period of time, this relationship may shift — today's winner is not always in that happy position tomorrow.

The exercise itself is extremely complex, involving qualifications and variations that are not constant in the first place and which are genuinely difficult to assess in the second.

Finally, the benefits — and costs — of being part of a country rather than being confined to national existence as a small region are not always susceptible to this sort of economic analysis.

The omissions which were so quickly spotted in Quebec's attempt at a balance sheet approach to confederation a few months ago made some sort of reply essential but it did not increase enthusiasm for the task. For one thing, the omissions in the Quebec analysis were so obvious that there was more than political dissatisfaction with the product — it was intellectually unsatisfactory as well.

Obvious Omissions

At last month's Downing Street summit in London, some point was made of the that of the Western world's big seven fact that of the Western world's big seven trading nations, Canada is the only one that operates on the basis of a domestic market smaller than 100,000,000 customers. The others of the big seven are the United States, Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Japan. Several of these countries have national populations below the hundred million level but those who do are linked in the European Community and that customs union provides them with access to what is an effective domestic market of far more than 200,000,000.

The small national market, 22,000,000 plus, is one of Canada's greatest handicaps as a big international trader. It forces Canada into far too heavy a reliance upon international trade, to the extent that about 25 per cent of our economic activity flows from that source. The United States is a huge international trader but a far smaller portion of its total economy rests on that source—it is the big American population itself that supports most of the economic activity in the United States. This is true also of the others in the big seven. The small Canadian market, in addition, affects productivity severely. We have some industries, of which steel is probably the outstanding example, which can attain optimum size based on the Canadian market and hence operate with as high levels of productivity as any rivals, in part because post war expansion has been rapid and much of the plant is new. There are others, though, where Canada has great difficulty in attaining world-scale plants. That problem afflicts parts of the chemical industry. In textiles, upon which so many people depend for their livelihood, our best plants are far below world scale when that is measured by the long-run factories in the United States and Britain.

Given this background, what sort of accounting tabulation measures the economic benefits of the federation? If the existing market is too small for most industry, what would be the effects of an even smaller one and what price is legitimate for the benefits of one at 22,000,000? In the purely economic field, this is probably the greatest difficulty facing anyone who tries to draw up an accountant's balance sheet.

QUEBEC
. . . strong growth rate

In presenting the federal attempt at one, which was drawn up in close co-operation with the provinces, Finance Minister Donald Macdonald was at pains to emphasize its experimental nature.

"It should be noted, however, that these accounts are labelled as experimental," he said in presenting them. ". . . even though the picture they present is favorable to the federal position on the importance of maintaining the confederation, I would urge that people use these data with some caution."

Among other things, these new accounts compare growth rates of the provinces in total and on a per capita basis with the rates of other countries. This comparison shows that the Canadian growth rate and that of most provinces matches that of most European countries. In terms of gross domestic product per capita, one of the basic measurements of growth, Canada exceeded the United States, Australia, Sweden and Britain. More importantly in this context, that growth was spread more evenly across the country than many imagine. Alberta, of course, was very high but its performance reflects the rapid rise in the price of oil, a rapidly diminishing resource. Quebec's per capita growth rate was marginally higher than Ontario's a finding that runs clearly contrary to the average idea of the situation changes. Quebec's share of total domestic production declined during the Australia, Switzerland and Luxembourg in the 1961-74 base period.

When provincial totals are used, different results show up because of population changes. Quebec' share of total demestic production declined during the period. On a per capita basis, provincial shares of GDP changed little except in the case of Alberta after the change in oil prices. Then it rose rapidly.

No Basis

Some of this performance seems at variance with the problems of a small domestic market pointed out earlier. The great difference, of course, is that Canada is a very wealthy country, rich in its own resources, where many of the nations with whom the comparison is made are not and are heavily dependent upon foreign sources of supply. In the export of primary products, a small home market does not matter much. It is when a nation seeks to expand its manufacturing industries that this begins to hurt.

The problems of allocating the benefits of federal spending are real and one example cited is that of the Export Development Corporation. Because it is in Ottawa, all benefits from its activities are attributed to Ontario where, in reality, they flow to other provinces as well. Allocating the burden of indirect federal taxation is difficult as well because it is attributed provincially according to the location of the producer yet it is acually borne by the consumer who may be in another province. Adjustments have been attempted but the difficulty of precision is obvious. In the long run, these new accounts will probably have value but at present they are not the best basis for a fundamental political dispute.

Press Criticism

On May 29, while watching Capital Comment, I was quite amused by this question asked by Mr. Hume: "Why are the NDP so critical of the press?"

I believe they are critical, as everyone should be critical of an institution that claims to provide public service but doesn't do it properly. I am not critical of the individual reporter, for it is not he who has the last say, it is his boss, the institution.

First, in the case of M.E.L. Paving, the government and B.C. Rail were accused of civil fraud. This went to court, and during the trial the only paper to provide the public with any real information was the Nelson Daily News. The other major newspapers did not appear interested. Now we find they say little about the fact that Bill Bennett's government settled the case out of court, and in doing so, admitted guilt. Then the report by the in-house inquiry was, that the government was not guilty of civil fraud. Why did the press not demand an answer to: Why did the government settle out of court when there was no need to?

They just conveniently accepted the government's story, that we would save money by admitting guilt, and pay $2 million, and at the same time not mention that other companies that dealt with B.C. Rail over the Dease Lake extension are now trying to see if they can get more money too.

The press reports that there are cheap ferry fares to help senior citizens, but makes nothing of the fact that they exist only on Monday through Thursday. Big deal, how many people do most of their travelling during the week?

I believe that we should be critical of the press, for it claims to provide the public with an information service. But it doesn't provide us with all the information so we can make an honest observation. It tells us just what it wants, perhaps leaving out what may be the most pertinent information — information that could be the deciding factor.

We are critical of the government when we feel that it is not operating in the best interests of the public. Should we not be just as critical of the press? — James Bates, Victoria.

Virgin Timber

It has come to my attention that there is still some virgin timber left in the Victoria area. This timber is on land owned by the government a few miles from Jordan River. Rayonier Logging Co. has the timber rights to this land.

This land should be preserved as parkland for the people of British Columbia to enjoy. There is virtually no virgin timber left in the Victoria area and it seems to me this is a gross oversight on the part of the government.

I hope something can be done. Otherwise our children will grow up never being able to see our forests as they once were. — Judith C. Williams, Victoria.

Comatose on July 1

The editorial June 7 (Put Out More Balloons) in reference to Victoria Mayor Mike Young was excellent in every way. May I put in my 12 cents' postage worth in my own manner? However, my having generations back to the middle 1840s, credentials in two wars and a 100 per cent war pension, I am not without knowledge of certain actions taken by a certain class of people who considered even thinking for any part of Canadianism as back-stabbing selfishness. Our city mayor uses the term hoax. This in my mind tells me his Canadianism if any is very thin. Then he goes on to say he is for unity and then counteracts that by stating this province has more justification for separating than Quebec.

I can't help but wonder if this is why there is much emphasis on the May 24 two-hour parade, with a live image of Queen Victoria, with the week of Gay '90s, colonial era.

For many years I have roamed by car in Victoria on July 1 only to find the city almost totally comatose. — Len Skelton, 4068 Grange Road.

No Tea Party

Fred Usher's comment to the media last weekend that "the Oak Bay Tea Party is now much more than a group of old ladies sipping tea" should not go unchallenged.

He should be reminded that it was these fascinating individuals who created the unique atmosphere of Oak Bay we are on the verge of losing today.

Ferris wheels and cotton floss at Willows Beach will never create that same atmosphere and should be returned to the PNE parking lot. — U. Dennis Eyolfson, 165 Barkley Terrace.

JOHNSON . . . still stonewalling

Fat City Reduces But Not CBC

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Big adjustments are underway in "fat city." Ottawa in several of its guises is facing up to the new Canadian situation. The critique which has developed across the country sees this as the lushest of all cities in the western world: leaving aside the irony that the capital ballooned into excess under Trudeau and is now tightening down under the same auspices. The odd thing is that everybody here has the message but the CBC.

Last week Al Johnson, the CBC president, and until recently a high mandarin, was stonewalling before an unhappy Parliamentary committee. Then Johnson's staff whipped around to hundreds of offices a major speech he made to the effect that "we're all in the same boat," which (would you believe) has the general thesis the CBC problems are everybody's problems, and everybody is responsible for the bind the CBC is in.

Meanwhile the National Capital Commission and the Public Service Commission and most of the leadership of the Public Service Unions and the mayor and council of the city of Ottawa know that the boom stopped two years ago and that Ottawa is on a straightened course. There's humility. Prominent men are apologetic. There are no longer denials about low morale and a weak sense of purpose in the federal bureaucracy. At least there is talk about "efficiency" and "trimming the fat," and getting a good day's work out of every employee.

For the first time in my memory of 20 years here, the question of dismantling the CBC is being talked about by those politicians who ten years ago would have ridiculed such a proposition as the vengeful animus of a handful of private broadcasters.

What's most ironical in the slow emergence of the question — why keep the CBC? — is that one would expect it to be fixed on Radio Canada, i.e., the French side of the CBC. It has been attacked by French Canadian Grits from the PM down. The CRTC has its inquiry of sorts going on into these allegations of separatist bias. But the place where the CBC has lost its constituency is in English Canada. It's going to take a lot more than "90 Minutes Live" or "The Fifth Estate" (the two jewels which the CBC brass most boast about) to regain that constituency.

The classic roles of the CBC have been to bring radio and TV service to all Canadians everywhere in the country, regardless of costs for the techniques and distribution. That, and to produce "Canadian" programs. It did this beautifully in radio, with less alacrity and vision with TV. Now that it has the TV distribution system the only places in which it is left with the big proportions of the viewers in English-speaking Canada is where there is little or no competition. This is essentially in the hinterlands, now that cable systems are boosting distant on-air signals into more and more city homes.

What has particularly weakened the CBC's respect among the elected representatives across the country is its failure (in TV, not radio) to be a top-notch producer of regional television. The lower mainland of B.C. tends to simmer in anger about domination from Toronto.

Some time this late summer or fall I think there'll be a major inquiry into the CBC and its future, including the question of splitting English and French into distinct corporations. I think the inquiry will also be asked to examine the matter of separating the distribution system from the production side of television, with the idea of opening up production competition to companies of creative people, not only on a national but also on a regional basis.

Many of us have seen the trends underway which dictate either the end of the CBC as we know it or an immensely reformed and streamlined operation. Nobody came up with the leadership within the CBC to reform or reorganize the result. Few give a damn for the costly monster. More and more wonder, tantalizingly, why bother?

The 'Red Connection' in World Drug Trade

By DENNIS BLOODWORTH

SINGAPORE — As anti-narcotic teams crack down on drug traffic from the opium-growing "Golden Triangle" in Southeast Asia to the streets of San Francisco, investigators are trying to follow up the most tantalizing of all leads — the "red connection."

The Malaysian army, fighting a hit-and-miss war against Communist terrorists in the mountainous Thai border area, is taking casualties from a silent and deadly addition to the enemy's armory — heroin. According to personnel chief Major-General Mohammed Ghazali, the Communist tactic of trying to enfeeble the security forces pitted against them with dope has claimed few victims among soldiers so far, but his disclosure followed the capture in April of a processing laboratory run by the guerrillas in southern Thailand.

The home affairs ministers of both Malaysia and Singapore has earlier accused the Communists of fighting a 20th century "opium war" against democratic government, of smuggling drugs southward into their countries in order to undermine moral resistance to the march of Marxism-Leninism, as the Vietnamese were reported to have done in Vietnam. But this was the first time that damning proof of their complicity in the commerce had been obtained.

Charges that drugs are being quietly channelled out of China itself have always been submerged in a muddy flow of highly suspect anti-Chinese propaganda from the Russians, who have vociferously claimed that heroin smuggled into Moscow originates in Hong Kong, "where Chinese Maoists organize the sale and distribution of narcotics through their agents."

Heroin factories have reputedly been pinpointed in South China, and "Yunnan" opium has appeared on the Asian market from the province of that name. But there has been no valid case for supposing that Peking connived at these local cracks in the Communist system, which makes drug-traffickers liable to the death penalty. In February the left-wing press revealed that Chinese secret police had smashed one dope ring in Canton, but it was masterminded from Hong Kong and was passing drugs into China, not out of it.

The Chinese have always indignantly denied all accusations that they are guilty of "exporting" narcotics — a denial upheld by the United Nations — and insist that they have eliminated addiction within the People's Republic itself. Similarly, the Vietnamese protest that they are not "exporting" revolution by slipping captured American arms to terrorists in Thailand or Malaysia, and the new China of Chairman Hau also seems to be backing "people's wars" in those countries with words rather than weapons. For one thing, the economic problems of Peking and Hanoi demand that they do not jeopardize their improved credit-rating with the West.

However, this innocence can be corrupting, for it means that the outlawed Communist guerrilla movements of South-East Asia must look elsewhere for their fighting funds — "Vietnamese" light arms have appeared among insurgents in Thailand, but it is believed that they were bought from gunrunners for cash. Thai commanders in the Thai-Malaysian border area have reported that the terrorists are therefore pushing narcotics, not only in order to corrupt the army, the police and the population in turn, but to finance the purchasing of arms and explosives and the paying of subversive agents. Malaysian Communist guerrillas have also been taxing and "protecting" professional Thai syndicates smuggling in heroin that was often processed from raw opium supplied by Burmese Communist guerrillas farther north in the first place.

The paradoxes do not end there. The six-month-old administration of Prime Minister Thanin Kraivichien in Thailand has started to stamp hard on drug traffic. The first heroin courier has been summarily shot in Bangkok, the Thai Border Patrol Police (and the Burmese) have been raiding vigorously along the opium caravan routes and in the frontier hills where the heroin factories lie hidden, while the noose on narcotic peddlers has been tightened at most key points on the map — Tokyo, Hong Kong, Malaysia, Singapore, Amsterdam, London, and the seaboard cities of the United States. The poppy-growing "Golden Triangle", where Burma, Thailand and Laos meet, has yielded a bumper crop this year, but the syndicates are lying doggo, and the price of opium has fallen by half.

Nevertheless the ambitious proposal of U.S. Congressman Lester Wolff for pre-emting the market by buying up the entire harvest could still rebound against the forces for good. For the net effect would be to underpin the source of income on which armed insurgents in Burma — whether pro-Peking Communists or Chinese Nationalist remnants or Shan and Kachin hillmen — directly or indirectly run their rebellions.

And Wolff must avoid a reputation for kicking into his own goal. Because the final irony is that in the opinion of disgusted Thai narcotics suppression officers, this tenacious enemy of the whole appalling commerce effectively sabotaged their operation against traffickers on May 17, when he publicly disclosed the names of 12 suspected dope-ring bosses in Thailand, so that the American people would "know their enemy".

The immediate consequence is that the investigators actually engaging that enemy will not know him any more, one official in Bangkok pointed out bitterly. The 12 will have promptly fled the country, they will be replaced by unidentified faces, and the entire campaign has therefore been put back to square one.

On the other hand the traffickers — Communist or capitalist — will have no difficulty in identifying their benefactor: Congressman Wolff is well-known as Chairman of the House of Representatives Committee on Drug Abuse Control.

Controls: Gap Between Rich, Poor Gets Wider

By LEONARD SHIFRIN

OTTAWA — It struck me as appropriate that the unveiling of Ottawa's plans for decontrol was accompanied by news of the west coast mining company which had boosted its president's salary by $60,000 while the Anti-Inflation Baord was holding its workers to a six-percent wage hike.

The president's good fortune hadn't contravened the anti-inflation regulations, according to Finance Minister Don Macdonald, because the average raise for the company's executive group wasn't more than $2,400. He declined to offer details as to what manner of executive suite reorganization might have been employed to achieve that result.

The so-called "rough justice" of the controls program has clearly been less rough on some than on others.

While the effect — if any — that the controls have had on the inflation rate is uncertain, their success in widening income disparities was assured by their design.

For one thing, although the government persists in describing the salary restraints as "income controls," they are no such thing. The only form of income they apply to is wages.

Increases in interest and divident income, for example, are ignored. And there is no ceiling on income gains from professional fees either.

The doctors and lawyers who head Canada's earnings list each year have not been held to a $2,400 annual increase. But it will be the latter part of 1978 — long after the controls program has passed into history — before figures are released on their 1976 income gains.

And the $2,400 ceiling on wage hikes, of course, didn't apply to all salaried workers either. Unlike the British controls, which provided for the same $12 a week maximum wage increase for all employees, Canada's scheme has operated on a percentage basis. While $2,400 is the ceiling for some, the limit for others had been $700 or $800.

Moreover, that was only the direct effects of the controls. Equally important in reshaping income shares were the indirect effects — the selective restraints in government programming which accompanied them.

The 1976 suspension of family allowance indexing, for example, had a far greater impact on low-income families than on those with top incomes.

And the elimination of the unemployed insurance provision that low-income recipients supporting dependents receive three-quarters rather than two-thirds of their former earnings, needless to say, had an even more selective impact.

But the prime fatality was the $1.1 billion guaranteed income program for the poor that had been slated for introduction in 1976. All that now remains of it is a scaled-down $300 million income supplementation scheme which may or may not see the light of some distant — and as yet unspecified — day.

The list of control-era restraints aimed at the poor is long, with significant entries at provincial as well as federal levels. Quebec's reduction of a scheduled 32-cents-an-hour increase in the minimum wage to 20 cents a few days before it was to take effect probably wins the blatancy award in the former category, but it was by no means in a class by itself.

All of that, however, is now water under the bridge according to Ottawa's discussion paper on decontrol and post control — optimistically entitled "Agenda for Co-operation."

The "fair sharing of income" is once again one of the government's "essential economic goals."

It "sees an adequate and efficient social security system as an aid to economic growth . . . fully accepts its responsibility to provide a minimum standard of living for those who are unable to meet their basic needs . . . (and) remains committed to narrowing extremes of income distribution."

Forgive me my touch of skepticism, but a government concerned with "narrowing extremes of income distribution" would have designed a very different set of controls.

There was nothing inherent in the concept of controls, after all, that required wage-gain ceilings more than three times as high for those earning top incomes as for those struggling to get by on small ones. Nor was there anything which required non-wage income — which accrues overwhelmingly to the well-to-do — to be exempted from the regulations.

In fact, the period in which income shares were to be determined by government fiat was uniquely suited to an altering of the process of the rich getting richer and, in relative terms, the poor poorer.

So while I don't doubt that much of what is forecast in the discussion paper will come to pass — the multipartite consultative forum, the prices and incomes (which probably really means wages again) monitoring agency and so on — I can't help reading its section on social security with a grain of salt.

And it even provides the grain of salt.

While "it is possible, either through taxes and transfers or through private and public sector wage policy, to achieve a narrowing of income differentials," says the paper, a "broad consensus" is required. "If such a consensus does not exist, attempts to legislate such a narrowing are likely to do more harm good."

In other words, if the government restrains its passion to do good and instead does nothing, it will have been entirely our fault . . — just like everything else that has gone wrong while it has been minding the store.

A Little Zugunruhe Before They Leave

Thanks to a hundred-scoters on Royal Roads last week, my vocabulary has been enriched by one word — zugunruhe.

Zugunruhe is not a word I'm likely to use often; it might come in handy to revive a lagging conversation some time. But I'll have to use it with discretion. The only translation I have — and that may not be literal — is "nighttime activity," a phrase frought with all kinds of embarrassing social complications.

But back to those scoters and my first encounter with zugunruhe. The birds — mostly Surf Scoters but with half-a-dozen White-wings to round out the figure — were riding at anchor off Victoria when they should have been half way to their nesting grounds in northern Canada.

Their tardy departure — they were gone a couple of days later — set me, as such incidents have so often in the past, to speculating on the vagaries of bird migration.

In trying to describe and explain the annual phenomenon of migration, it is easy to fall into the trap of generalization and, in the interests of simplicity, to ignore the exceptions to those generalities. But there was no ignoring those sectors: if they hadn't left when they did, they'd have become one of the exceptions.

Instead of being part of that vast exodus that saw most of our wintering waterfowl gone by mid-May, this bunch was either catching a late flight or had decided to opt out of this year's nuptial activities. Subsequent events seemed to rule out the latter, but if they had stayed they would have been exceptions to the rule that scoters migrate.

The issue is somewhat confused by the fact that most of the birds in question were apparently yearlings, only just getting into their first adult plumage, and as such were not necessarily physiologically — or maybe even psychologically — prepared for what lay ahead.

But let's ignore that consideration and suppose, for the sake of discussion, that those scoters were to stay here all summer, that they — like a handful of Western Grebes, Red-necked Grebes — didn't migrate; what then?

It was during my efforts to find an answer to "what then" that I foundered on zugunruhe.

Even a cursory reading of the ornithological literature on migration reveals a strangely consistent pattern; the answers to the "whats" of migration are legion; to the "whys" and "how" of migration, answers are, to say the least, scarce.

The mechanics of migration — such things as navigation, speed, timing — have all been studied, and continue to be studied, to the extent that acceptable descriptions have evolved to reveal what takes place — physiologically as well as mechanically — when a bird migrates.

But, while it is known that birds use the sun, moon, and even the stars, for navigation, it is not yet understood how they do this. Nor is it completely clear why, if we accept the principle that the availability of food is an important stimulus to migration, some kinds of birds migrate long before seasonal effects on their food supply become evident. And also, while we know that the lengthening days of spring, and the shorter days of autumn, cause profound physical changes within a bird — changes which apparently trigger migration — we do not yet understand why some birds do not react to these stimuli.

Take the Oregon Juncos that winter in northern California; many of them spend their lives within a few miles of where they were born; others travel hundreds of miles each year in their journeys to and from their nesting grounds. But both are exposed to the same effects of the changing length of day and both experience the same internal physical changes.

So, why does one junco migrate and the other not? I'm afraid zugunruhe does little to answer this question but it does reveal another of those little inconsistencies — exceptions, if you will — that make the study of bird migrating the delightful puzzle it is.

Apparently some enterprising researcher — the studies may have begun in northern Europe if the word zugunruhe is any indication — working under cover of darkness, discovered that birds due to migrate will engage in zugunruhe before they move; those that are not due to migrate, will not.

And before my earlier allusions to the possible impropitious use of the word take over, let me say that "nighttime activity" in this case simply means a recognizable pattern of wakefulness and restlessness that precedes noctural migratory flight.

So, there you have it; zugunruhe!

NEW LOOK BY A-G AT JUDGE'S ACTS

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Law Society of Manitoba released a report Friday on former provincial judge Anthony Pilutik, and Attorney-General Howard Pawley ordered another look at some of the complaints that led to his resignation.

Pilutik resigned from the bench early last year on the eve of a judicial inquiry into his conduct. The law society has suspended him from practising law for 30 months and ordered him to take an alcoholism treatment course.

The document released by the law society shows the judge admitted to complaints ranging from drunken behavior to presiding at the trials of social acquaintances.

The report says Pilutik:

—stayed a speeding charge against a friend in a case at Powerview, Man., in October, 1973;

—associated with persons facing criminal charges or known criminals;

—attended the wedding of a man a month before he presided at the man's trial on charges of rape and gross indecency; and —drank excessively in public, sometimes after hearing alcohol-related charges against others.

The law society concluded that none of the complaints involved criminal conduct or dishonesty.

However, Pawley has ordered a review of the case by his department and admitted Friday that he had not been informed about some of the incidents in the law society's report.

"I cannot understand why I was not told about them," he said in an interview. "If I had been aware, I would not have tolerated that pattern of conduct to have continued."

Pawley said he plans to speak to chief provincial judge Harold Gyles, the man responsible for supervising provincial judges.

The attorney-general had told the legislature in February 1976 that no other person associated with the administration of justic had been involved in the Pilutik complaints, but the law society report links court officials and policemen with some of his drinking incidents.

None of the incidents led to charges. Fawley said most of the complaints unfolded too late for the laying of charges. Summary conviction charges must be laid within six months of an alleged incident.

Once Mighty Lumber Firm Closing Its Doors

The once mighty empire of Moore-Whittington Lumber Ltd. comes to an end this month with the closing of its manufacturing plant at 2614 Bridge St.

The plant, which manufactures windows, doors, shelves and other home construction items, will close Tuesday, putting a dozen employees out of work.

Company president T. J. Lawson said the decision to close was taken with regret but was based on market conditions.

At one time the firm employeed hundreds of people in logging, sawmills and building supply sales.

The company began in 1893 when William Moore and Ernest Whittington formed a partnership to construct houses. They made a profit of $60 on their first venture, a house in Oak Bay.

The two founders made a reputation for skill in joinery and interior finishing and Moore and Whittington became a prominent contracting firm in Victoria.

Their original site was at the Douglas Hotel stands. the douglas Hotel stands. They later moved to Yates St. and then to Bridge St.

Because of a shortage of lumber, the partners constructed a sawmill where British Columbia Forest Products now operates. Because of a log shortage for the mill, they purchased timber rights in the Goldstream area and went into logging.

Moore handled this division while Whittington looked after manufacturing of finished products.

The company expanded into several Vancouver Island communities.

"When the founders retired, their sons took over as managing directors of the divisions their fathers headed.

Stan Moore started in 1923 as a mill laborer and moved up to the top post. Ronald Whittington started as an apprentice in the sash and door factory.

Meanwhile, the elder Whittington died in 1942 and Moore died in 1950.

In 1955 the company embarked on a major expansion program with $366,000 being spent on two sawmills (at the BCFP site) and a $100,000 addition to the retail store on Bridge St.

After that, the company began to sell off some of its holdings.

In December, 1963, it sold 65 per cent of its assets to ECFP, including the sawmill site and the company's 30,000-acre tree farm l icence in the Nitinat Lake area.

The original sawmills were closed and workers moved to the BCFP sawmill on the adjacent lot or to the BCFP plant at Crofton.

In July, 1972, the company sold its retail outlets in Victoria, Nanaimo and Campbell River to Quesnel Supply Co. Ltd.

This left the manufacturing division, which closes Tuesday.

Ron Whittington, son of the founder, died Aug. 26, 1974. Stan Moore, son of the other founder, lives in Victoria.

Court Rules Sun Justified In Refusing Gay Tide Ad

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal ruled Friday that the Vancouver Sun was justified in its refusal to publish an advertisement for the Gay Alliance newspaper Gay Tide, reversing a ruling by a B.C. human rights branch inquiry board.

The two-to-one appeal court decision upheld the daily newspaper's appeal of the board ruling which said it had violated the human rights code in October, 1974, by refusing to publish an advertisement in its classified section for a four-day period.

The proposed advertisement was for three lines.

The board held the Sun, in refusing the ad, was in breach of the code by discriminating against the homosexuals without reasonable cause. It noted the Sun claimed a right to refuse the ad because of its advertising policy to avoid ads dealing with homosexuals or homosexuality in its belief that homosexuality is offensive to public decency, and that the advertisement would offend some of its subscribers.

The board said the basic reason for the refusal was a personal bias on the part of certain individuals within the management of the Sun advertising department.

Mr. Justice A. E. Branca said the real question for the board to decide was not whether certain individuals within management have a bias against homosexuals or homosexuality — which may have motivated the policy — but whether the resultant policy dealing with public decency constituted a reasonable cause for refusal to publish.

"In other words, despite the fact that certain individuals may have had that bias and that bias may well have motivated the refusal, the vital question remained: did the resultant policy of the newspaper furnish reasonable cause within the meaning of the code which might constitue a lawful group for refusal?

"I am of the opinion that in justice a bias motivated because of the belief of some people that homosexual engages in unnatural practice or that their sexual practices are immoral or against religions does not make the conclusion wrong, in the sense that is is unreasonable.

"If one bases a bias against homosexuals because they are persons who engange in unnatural sexual activity, which may make them guilty of a serious crime in certain circumstances, and because they are forbidden entry in Canada as undesirables, can one say that such a bias, if it is arrived at for those reasons, is unreasonable? I would not think so."

Mr. Justice Branca said the board did not find that the Sun advertising individuals were impelled toward their bias because of base views or by spite, malice or in bad faith.

Mr. Justice P. D. Seaton, who would have dismissed the appeal, held that the board did not limit itself to a subjective assessment of the Sun's reason for refusing the ad and he was not persuaded that the board erred in law.

Basford Will Probe Gun Running Charge

VANCOUVER (CP) — Justice Minister Ron Basford said Friday he doubted a claim that arms are being illegally shipped from Canada to Northern Ireland extremists but said he will ask the RCMP to investigate the charge.

Basford made the statement in an interview in response to an allegation made Thursday by Jim Kennedy, an Irish nationalist facing possible deportation on suspicion he entered Canada under an alias.

RCMP have said they are investigating to determine whether Kennedy is a man who has a record of violent activity in Northern Ireland and West Germany. A deportation hearing is scheduled next week.

Kennedy said the Canadian government and RCMP have known about Protestant arms shipments to Northern Ireland but have turned a blind eye to it. He said the real reason for his imprisonment and deportation proceedings is that the RCMP realized he was close to exposing the gun circuit and did not want it made public.

Basford said Kennedy's statements were the first he had heard of charges of gun smuggling from Canada to Northern Ireland.

"I would regard statements coming from either side in the Northern Ireland conflict with some caution as to their accuracy," Basford said. "However, if he has evidence of any criminality occurring in Canada, then I hope that he would transmit it immediately to me for reference to the RCMP."

RCMP spokesman Bruce Northrop said that "speaking for the RCMP in the Greater Vancouver area, we deny the aforementioned allegations of being aware of gun-running but refusing to stop it.

"If we had any intelligence or information pertaining to any criminal activity, including illegal trafficking in weapons into, in, or from Canada, we would pursue such investigations to the fullest possible extent."

FREIGHT RUN REFUSED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Archie York, owner of Quadrant Transportation Services Ltd., says his company will not deliver freight to north coastal British Columbia communities now served by Rivtow Straits when Rivtow's service terminates June 30.

Rivtow announced Wednesday it would discontinue its tug and barge service to ports north of Prince Rupert on June 30, indicating Quadrant would take over the route.

Communities affected are Stewart, Port Simpson, Alice Arm, Kincolith and Kitsault.

York said Thursday the freight run would not be profitable unless the motor carrier's commission gave Quadrant the right to deliver freight to and from the lucrative Prince Rupert market.

He said the commission, which regulates freight and passenger carriers on B.C. highways, has only granted him a temporary permit to carry goods between Vancouver and the ports north of Prince Rupert.

"I'm not going to spend $1,400 to drive a truck up from Vancouver, then load the freight on a barge and only get $400 for my troubles," said York.

SCHOOLS USE 2,4-D

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The controversial herbicide 2,4-D is being used as a dandelion-control spray in Kamloops schools, support services director Wils Pelly said Friday.

The herbicide is applied according to the weather, without regard to whether children are at school, he said.

Don Ellsay, president of the British Columbia Society for Pollution and Environmental Control, said 2,4-D was developed as a biological warfare weapon in the Second World War.

The herbicide contained dioxin, a highly potent poison, he said, adding that two Okanagan medical health unit officers opposed or recommended extreme caution in the use of 2,4-D on school grounds.

Pelly said the Kamloops School District has had a weed-killing program for the past three years.

The herbicide has been the subject of controversy in Vernon, where it is used by school districts. A recent proposal to use 2,4-D to control milfoil in the Okanagan valley has also met with opposition.

Coast Transport Needs Studied

Transport Minister Jack Davis has announced that the University of British Columbia will conduct a $72,000 study of transport needs of coastal communities in northern B.C.

Davis said the UBC centre for transportation studies will look at various transportation modes and is to report by Sept. 30.

Pharmacare Protest

VANCOUVER (CP) — About 60 people gathered Thursday to protest the banning of over-the-counter drugs, including vitamins, antacids and cold remedies under Pharmacare.

Only Pat Tidball, Pharmacare director, and an assistant to Opposition leader Dave Barrett attended the meeting.

Hotel Strike Ends

KELOWNA (CP) — A strike by about 40 members of the Hotel, Restaurant, Culinary and Bartenders Union ended shortly after it began Friday when management of the Sandman Inn agreed to return to the bargaining table.

Company owner Bob Gaglardi said the compromise was worked out with the aid of British Columbia Labor Relations Board officials.

The workers are seeking a first contract, but Gaglardi has said the company will not sign a contract until the LRB rules next month on a company appeal against the union's certification, which was granted in April.

Ruling Protested

VANCOUVER (CP) — A ruling that the Unemployment Insurance Act does not deprive women of equality before the law on the basis of sex "shows that women are still being denied acceptance as competent and serious members of the work force," the Vancouver Status of Women said Friday.

The organization was referring to a Federal Court of Appeal decision earlier this week allowing an appeal by the attorney-general of Canada against an umpire's decision that Stella Bliss of Vancouver was discriminated against by reason of sex.

Bliss became unemployed because of pregnancy, but had not been employed long enough to be entitled to pregnancy benefits.

Ocean Parks Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Betty Pratt-Johnson of Vancouver has launched a campaign for the establishment of provincial underwater parks.

Ms. Pratt-Johnson, author of the book "141 dives", said Thursday her diving experience around the world showed her British Columbia has some of the most colorful marine life to be found anywhere.

Credit Union Assets Top $2B in B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's credit union movement has reported 1976 assets of over $2 billion, 31 per cent higher than at the end of 1975.

B.C. Central Credit Union's annual report, released Thursday showed savings of credit members had increased by 22 per cent to $1.9 billion.

Peter Podovinkoff, chairman of B.C. Central said the most vital statistic was the growth in membership which totalled nearly 688,000 at the end of 1976. At that date 176 credit unions were operating a total of 269 offices in the province.

B.C. Central is the central body for its 176 credit union members, 77 co-operative members and 51 other organizations.

B.C. Central itself reported total assets of $367 million at the end of 1976, 30.9 per cent higher than a year earlier. Deposits increased by 51.7 per cent to $287 million, while there was a 19 per cent decline to $74.4 million in loans to members.

Gross income was $34.4 million, up 23.9 per cent from $27.7 million in 1975. After tax earnings for the year were $2,881,172, of which $2,273,626 was paid out in dividends to members, compared with earnings of $2,298,835 and dividends of $1,871,856 in 1975.

George May, chief executive officer and general manager, said there were more direct moves by credit unions during 1976 into ancillary financial areas such as providing housing, insurance, travel and recreational services for their members.

He said new financial services to be introduced this year will provide members with a foreign payment system which will enable credit unions to issue foreign drafts drawn on banks throughout the world.

SOVIETS PLAN TO DRILL DEEPEST HOLE

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Soviets are going to make another try at digging the world's deepest hole in the ground.

The official Tass news agency said Thursday Soviet scientists plan to dig a hole 9.3 miles deep in Southern Azerbaijan to study the Earth's crust.

Soviet authorities announced similar deep well projects in February, 1972, and August 1974, but apparently never reached the intended record depths.

The deepest penetration into the Earth's crust is believed to be a gas well which reached 5.95 miles in 1974 in Washita County, Okla.

Rayonier Canada Ltd.

Ralph H.W. James — Rodger P. Manning — Thomas I. Briggs

Three appointments within the senior management group at Rayonier Canada Limited are announced.

Ralph H.W. James, who was director of cellulose operations for the Vancouver-based forest industry firm, has been promoted to the position of assistant general manager, with specific responsibilities for purchasing, transportation and business planning. Mr. James, a Chemistry graduate of England's Birmingham University, has been in the Canadian pulp and paper industry for over 25 years.

Rodger P. Manning, who was general logging manager, has assumed complete responsibility for the company's forest operations — logging, forestry, log trading and woods administration. A Forestry graduate of the University of Washington, Mr. Manning has had extensive forest management and logging experience.

Thomas I. Briggs, formerly manager, waterborne lumber sales, has moved to the position of manager, wood products sales. A Master of Science graduate of the University of British Columbia, Mr. Briggs joined the forest industry in 1956 and his experience has included domestic and export lumber sales and research. ***

Grits' Election Fever Cools

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — A general election this fall is no longer in the cards, according to Liberal caucus members who were once hawks on the subjects and are now doves.

The startling transformation is a direct result of the Ontario election outcome. The Grits see it as an indication of the mood of the electorate with voters obviously unhappy with unnecessary elections.

Prime Minister Trudeau has consistently said he is not interested in an autumn election because his government has a comfortable majority in parliament. But his rising popularity in public opinion polls and pressure from within his own caucus and advisors led to his denials of an early election being discounted. Now MPs on both sides of the house agree there will be no autumn election.

Parliament instead will buckle down to tackling the backlog of proposed legislation that is piling up. In addition there is to be a three-day debate on the controls program and there is talk of a two-day debate on national unity.

The June 30 target date for starting the summer recess is fading fast. But with the government committed to a debate in parliament on the Mackenzie Valley pipeline before it makes its decision known to President Carter, Sept. 1, the indications are the MPs will be summoned back into session in August.

They will rest easier now that the chances of a fall election have faded. Those who were "talking up" an early election on the government side argued that they would be "crazy" not to capitalize on the prime minister's renewed popularity and contended that the national unity issue was a "natural." Their idea was the PM should seek an overwhelming majority with which to confront Premier Rene Levesque.

Now the opposition parties are relaxing, confident that Premier Davis' experience added to the downfall of the Bourassa government in Quebec, when it brought on an early election, has cooled off the Grits.

OLD AGE PENSIONS UP $3.59 IN JULY

OTTAWA (CP) — The basic old age security pension will rise in July to $147.05, up $3.59 a month, the government announced Friday.

Pensions and supplements are indexed to the cost of living and are adjusted quarterly.

The maximum income supplement for a single person or a married person whose spouse is not receiving a pension or spouse's allowance rises at the same time to $103.14, up $2.52.

Married people who both are pensioners will receive a maximum supplement of $91.53, an increase of $2.23, and the maximum spouse's allowance — paid to people between 60 and 65 married to a pensioners — rises $5.82 to $238.63.

Income supplements and spouse's allowances are paid to people whose incomes are considered inadequate.

New Electoral Boundaries Add 18 Seats in Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — Membership in the Commons will swell by 18 to 282 after the next general election following electoral boundary changes that come into effect today.

Jean-Marc Hamel, the chief electoral officer, is preparing to send out the 1,000 tons of supplies that returning officers, poll clerks and enumerators will use for the nexxt federal vote.

The last few months have been uneasy ones for Hamel, who had to be prepared for an election on the former 264-seat distribution if Prime Minister Trudeau called a vote before today.

But the election chief said in an interview his real problems are just beginning as he moves to establish 65,000 election polls, educate workers and prepare for the next election.

Hamel says that many MPs have been under the mistaken impression they would be representing different people after June 11.

"But that's not true." They would continue to represent their current constituencies until Parliament is dissolved.

The redistribution, first since 1966, is based on the 1971 census, and will give the following provincial representation current numbers of ridings in bbrackets after the next election.

Northwest Territories two (one); B.C. 28 (23); Alberta 21 (19); Saskatchewan 14 (13); Manitoba 14 (13); Ontario 95 (88); Quebec 75 (74); Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick would have the same representation —seven, four, 11 and 10 seats respectively. And the Yukon will continue to have one MP.

Grit Fears Cabinet Power

JOYAL
. . . freedom infringed

By DAN POTTIER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Dissident Liberal MP Serge Joyal has again challenged some of the Trudeau government's legislative plans saying they could infringe on freedom of the press and give cabinet too much power.

Joyal, the member for Maisonneuve-Roseemont, told the Commons Friday his main concern was proposed communications legislation he says would give government too much control over the Canadian Radio and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) which regulates broadcasting.

He also challenged the proposal allowing the cabinet to exempt the federal and provincial governments from certain aspects of the communications legislation 'without having to get approval from the House or the courts."

Laws should apply the same way to all, he added, saying that parts of the proposed new immigration law also worried him.

Under the law someone could be banned entry into Canada on the basis of RCMP reports "without benefit or opportunity of a court appeal."

Joyal said Parliament should vigilantly guard the public's right to information and the application of the rule of law.

His statements were an attempt to clarify controversial statements he made a week ago in Montreal about attempts by the Trudeau government to harness the press and strip the courts of power to interpret laws.

TRANSIT AID TURNED DOWN

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald refuses to change his tune on urban transit aid despite repeated demands for more assitance from municipalities and MPs.

Macdonald said Friday outside the Commons there will be nothing dramatic in urban transit funds this year and he doubts the government will go beyond what has already been allocated.

His comments came after New Democratic MP David Orlikow (Winnipeg North) urged him in the Commons to help municipalities with public transport costs.

The finance minister was criticized in February after he told municipal leaders in Toronto that the government could not fulfill its 1974 election promise of substantial aid to urban transit. The minister said government spending restraint made it impossible to live up to that pledge.

Prime Minister Trudeau and other federal ministers later said the government still is considering urban transit assistance.

But Macdonald's comments suggest that if the cabinet agrees to further assistance, the additional money won't amount to much this year.

The government promised a $290-million program for urban transit vehicles and stations in the 1974 election.

Ottawa took a step toward meeting this promise by announcing a five-year, $100-million aid plan for commuter equipment in 1975. But the money was considered minimal by municipal officials and critics said the program was too restrictive.

45% Loan Rate Criminal, Says Proposed Credit Law

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Tony Abbott brought in new amendments to his federal consumer credit bill Friday that would make it a criminal offence to lend money at an interest rate of more than 45 per cent.

The change brings to 75 the number of government amendments to the proposed Borrowers and Depositors Protection Act. The bill was introduced by Abbott last November.

While many of the changes are considered technical in nature, the latest amendments led several opposition members to say the bill will never get final reading by the Commons before the summer recess.

Sinclair Stevens (PC—York Simcoe), party financial critic, has been fighting hard against a number of provisions of the bill, which would standardize credit regulations across the country. But he said his party is not trying to obstruct passage.

"We don't have to obstruct it," Stevens said. "The inept handling of this bill and the 75 amendments are doing it for us."

The setting of the "criminal rate" of interest at 45 per cent is designed as a means of controlling loan sharks, who often charge rates of more than 1,000 per cent a year.

Other amendments introduced Friday would alter proposed prepayment provisions on mortgages setting up a complex method of calculating penalties for early mortgage repayment. Second mortgages would be treated as any other consumer loan which the legislation would allow to be repaid at any time without notice or penalty.

Another amendment would require crediting of interest at least once a year instead of once a month. Banks and credit unions argue that crediting interest once a month would require additional manpower and add to costs that would ultimately be recovered from consumers.

A department official said, however, the bill's regulations will still require that interest be calculated on the basis of the average daily rather than the minimum monthly balance.

Bugging Coverup Alleged

EDMONTON (CP) — A lawyer representing a group of Edmonton policemen charged Friday that the RCMP is engaged in a cover-up over the alleged bugging of three of his clients in a Winnipeg, hotel in December, 1975.

During cross-examination in the fifth day of the Laycraft inquiry, Calgary lawyer Milt Harradence questioned RCMP Staff Sgt. Roy Gislason, in charge of a Winnipeg electronic surveillance unit, about a reported electronic sweep to find bugging devices that the RCMP was to have carried out in one of the Edmonton policemen's rooms.

Harradence told Gislason: "I put it to you that you surely know it — the search never occurred and it's part of a cover-up."

Gislason replied that this was not true "to my knowledge."

Harradence was referring to testimony Wednesday by Cpl. Gary Williams, an RCMP officer who was supposed to have carried out the sweep. Williams said he was not sure whether he did the search and he has no record of it.

EXTEND WIRETAPS, CHIEFS URGE

OTTAWA (CP) — Police chiefs Friday presented a brief to Justice Minister Ron Basford supporting longer notification periods under the wiretap law.

A proposed amendment before the Commons justice committee would extend to three years from 90 days the time within which those wiretapped or bugged would have to be notified of such surveillance.

The Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police, in the brief, said the three-year period may be insufficient in some cases involving investigation of organized crime.

"For fear of alerting top criminal echelons the RCMP alone has had to bypass 70 cases that it knew would require a greater time span than that permitted by law," the brief said.

Former Idi 'Supporter,' Briton Faces Execution

NAIROBI (AP) — Robert Scanlon, a former British businessman who helped carry Idi Amin in a sedan chair two years ago as a "gesture of friendship," faces execution if convicted of spying by the Ugandan dictator's military court.

Amin, whose six-year rule has been marked by bizarre threats against foreigners and allegations of mass murder, said Friday Scanlon will go before a firing squad by the end of next week if convicted.

Radio Uganda, monitored in Nairobi, said the time and place of the execution will be secret. The government-controlled radio said Scanlon, who took Ugandan citizenship in 1975, was being held in a remote area.

Radio Uganda also warned nearly 300 resident Britons they would be "put into the nearest military or other prison" if found in groups of more than three. The Britons — missionaries, businessmen and their families—were ordered earlier this week not to leave the country.

Scanlon and three other British businessmen were photographed in 1975 carrying the 6-foot-4, 250-pound Amin aloft in a sedan chair at a reception in Kampala, the capital. The pictures were distributed worldwide.

Scanlon told reporters then: "It was a thing that was done among friends and our biggest worry was that we would drop the president. There was no question of humiliation—it was a gesture of friendship."

Rain-Soaked Queen at Trooping the Color

LONDON (AP) — Her long blue skirt soaked with rain and her curls soggy with droplets, the Queen sat impassive atop her horse today as loyal subjects huddled under umbrellas to watch the review of royal troops at her official birthday pageant.

The trooping the color was London's third major spectacle in a week of silver jubilee celebrations marking the Queen's 25 years on the throne. It also was the third time the elaborately orchestrated festivities were drenched by unpredictable downpours in a chilly June. But thousands of tourists, Londoners and Britons from throughout the country surged into the heart of the city to cheer.

The Queen wore the scarlet jacket and gold braid of a colonel-in-chief of the Scots Guards as she rode sidesaddle down the half-mile boulevard—The Mall— stretching from Buckingham Palace to Horse Guards Parade opposite St. James's Park.

She was preceded down The Mall by Princess Margaret, the Queen Mother, Princess Anne and her husband Capt. Mark Phillips, who rode in open carriages as drums and trumpets heralded the Queen's approach.

Following behind the Queen on horseback and resplendent in scarlet jackets, gold braid, medals and bearskin hats, were Prince Philip, her son and heir Prince Charles, the Duke of Kent and 77-year-old Earl Mountbatten of Burma.

Flag-waving crowds stood 20 deep along the curbs to get a glimpse of the 51-year-old Queen, for many only a tiny bobbing figure in red, with a black cockade in her hat, as she rode past in the distance.

Mothers and fathers who arrived several hours before the ceremony but still found themselves at the back of the human barrier, passed children up to the curb where those with front-row standing positions became instant and good-natured foster parents during the festivities.

Political leaders and diplomats in London to attend the Commonwealth conference arrived in limousines to join hundreds of other ticket-holders seated on board bleachers with an unobstructed view of the parade ground. Side tiers were packed with onlookers who ordered tickets months in advance or else bought the few available at the last minute from scalpers asking up to $170 each.

Ladies were decked out as if for an Easter parade. Elaborate hats festooned with feathers, flowers, silk net and even miniature fruit wilted during the showers. But gentlemen in top hats and morning-coat tails all ... carry umbrellas, and when the scudding clouds let loose the bumpershoots sprang open in one giant gesture.

HUMANTARIAN WAR RULES SET

GENEVA (AP) — Ninety-seven countries and three liberation movements signed a document Friday completing four years of work on how to improve humanitarian rules of warfare.

Israel, protesting inclusion of the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO), refused to sign.

The document is a covering letter to go with two protocols adopted by the conference to update existing Geneva and Hague pacts.

The protocols are still subject to ratification by the parliaments or governing bodies of the individual nations.

Included are about 130 articles designed to gain better protection for civilians and sick, wounded or captured soldiers. They would require changes in military manuals of all countries that ratify them.

Key articles of the first protocol on international wars ban as war crimes strategic target bombings of cities, other "indiscriminate attacks," and destruction of dams and dikes. They also bar the bombing of nuclear power plants, offer immunity to medical aircraft, and grant captured guerillas prisoner-of-war status under certain conditions.

Migration Is Still a Mystery

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — Scientists still don't know how birds find their way in the world even though they have blurred their vision, eliminated landmarks, removed their peers and played tricks with time, light and sound.

When the swallows return each year to Capistrano, Calif., researchers return from the field with new theories. But clues have become so numerous, says one authority, Prof. William T. Keeton of Cornell University, that "in some ways we are more confused than ever."

Scientists have made progress in the last six or seven years and are far past the stage where instinct is the acceptable explanation for bird behavior.

Part of the problem in understanding how birds find paths across pathless skies is that they do not see, hear or feel things in the way that humans do.

Understanding navigation depends on combinations of factors that vary with weather conditions, the season, the species, the ages of birds and the experience of individuals among them.

This complexity, said Dr. Keeton, discouraged investigators because their observations failed to yield uniform results. But new theories are evolving from renewed scientific efforts.

This spring, Cornell researchers reported that caged pigeons—the guinea pigs of the avian behavior laboratories— can sense infra-sound caused by vibrations that human ears can't detect. Such sounds may travel thousands of miles without fading.

Prof. Donald Griffin of Rockefeller University recently analysed reports from balloonists and found that ordinary sound penetrates the silent skies more certainly than it spreads along the ground.

Roger Pasquier of the American Museum of Natural Hostory said this might help a night flyer find marshes by the croaking of frogs, or seashores by the pounding of surf. But again it is not known whether birds use these clues or whether they are wiped out by background noises.

There is a possibility that birds have a keen sense of smell to guide them to their breeding grounds, just as salmon follow their noses back to the streams of their birth.

Sawed-Off Shotgun Charge Sticks

Two men were cleared in Victoria county court Friday of three charges but were found guilty on one charge.

Ossie William Barnes, 28, and Patrick Norman Witter, 20, both formerly of 252 Gorge Road East, were acquitted of conspiracy to commit armed robbery at Coppens Jewellers in the Shelbourne Plaza March 15, possession of a restricted, unregistered, sawed-off shotgun and attempt to commit armed robbery at Coppens.

Both men were found guilty of possession of a sawed-off shotgun for a purpose dangerous to the public peace. They will be sentenced by Judge E. J. C. Stewart June 24 after pre-sentence reports are prepared.

Stewart began his remarks by saying "if ever there was a clear case of two persons acting in concert, this is it."

He went on to say that the time, place, suspicious manoeuvring of a car, their clothing, readily-available disguise and a sawed-off shotgun "was in fact a regular television scenario."

"Everything points without a doubt to preparations for a robbery, preparations I might say made with incredible stupidity," he said.

However, he said the crown had failed to establish a conspiracy as described in one count of the indictment and there was not evidence beyond a reasonable doubt.

He also said the crown had failed to show an attempt at armed robbery in another count.

And he found "merit" in a defence objection to the wording of the count relating to an unregistered firearm because it was phrased in the plural whereas the offence is where one person fails to have a certificate.

David Wilson, representing Barnes, said the confession of one conspirator is inadmissible in court against the other and therefore Barnes' statement (that they planned to rob Coppens or somewhere else but "chickened out") was not admissible against Witter.

Because of that, he said, the charge against Witter must fail and the charge against Barnes also had to fail because there cannot be a conspiracy of one.

Wilson pointed to Barnes' statement that they were leaving the shopping centre because "we got cold feet" and this was decided before they saw police.

He said a change of mind, as opposed to an interruption by police, meant they were not guilty of attempted armed robber.

Michael Hutchison, representing Witter, said Barnes' statement cannot be used directly or indirectly against his client and without the statement "there is absolutely nothing that takes Witter near to an agreement to commit a crime."

Crown counsel Peter Birkett said the actions of the two men and the weapon and disguises found in the car made clear they were "casing the place" and had got together to perform an unlawful act.

"They were obviously dressed to commit robbery. These people aren't going to a tea party with a shotgun and ammunition in the car," he said.

Before The Judge

Judge William Ostler ordered a presentence report for a 17-year-old who pleaded guilty to breaking and entering a place where he had been employed.

William Michael Witzaney, of 1807 Sooke Lake Road, pleaded guilty to a break-in Thursday morning at Reddi-Chef Kentucky Style Chicken, 889 Goldstream, Colwood.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said Witzaney and two others broke in through a small window at the rear and took $270 in cash. Mulligan added that Witzaney was very co-operative when questioned by Colwood RCMP and that $268 had been discovered.

Ostler remanded Witzaney to June 30 for sentencing, allowed him to go free but clamped an 11 p.m. curfew on the youth.

Fines totalling $350 were handed down by Ostler to 24-year-old Wayne Michael Jones, of 1312 Gladstone.

Jones was found guilty May 13 on charges of causing a disturbance by shouting, assault with intent to resist arrest and resisting lawful arrest in connection with a Nov. 9 incident at the Red Lion Inn.

Jones was fined $25 on the disturbance charge, $250 and placed on six months' probation for assault, and $75 for resisting arrest.

Jones also pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault causing bodily harm in connection with a May 16 incident in Saanich and a trial date of Sept. 1 as set.

Martin Roy Caines, 17, of 2530 Dowler Place, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a year's probation by Ostler.

Caines pleaded guilty to the lesser-included offence of common assault after being charged originally with indecent assault.

The incident involved a 30-year-old woman in the 1200-block Grant on Nov. 3.

Ostler, in passing sentence, specified that the probation be supervised.

George Earl Storry, 23, waived his preliminary hearing in connection with a Feb. 23 escape from Wilkinson Road jail.

Storry, convicted along with Ronald James Kellington on charges of kidnapping and two counts of extortion, is awaiting sentence on those charges Tuesday in Victoria county court before Judge M.L.T. Drake.

Drinking-drivers fined Friday by Ostler were Lester Alexander Erickson, 26, a member of the Canadian forces, $750; Yvon Reginald Clavette, 21, of 2731 Fernwood, $450; and Randall Irvine-Robertson, of Bamfield, $400.

RHODESIAN HANGINGS PROTESTED

LONDON (Reuter) — Rhodesian black nationalist leader Joshua Nkomo told the Commonwealth conference Friday that 15 blacks are to be hanged shortly in Rhodesia and called on Britain to "stop the massacres" by Prime Minister Ian Smith's government.

In a letter to Commonwealth Secretary-General Shridath Ramphal, Nkomo said the Smith government "is hanging many Africans every Monday on flimsy and framed-up charges."

"As I write, there are 15 known Africans on the hanging row who are due to be hanged any Monday from now."

Nkomo said in his letter: "It is incumbent upon the British government to stop the hanging of these 15 men, whose only crime is their love for freedom, and to stop the massacres and the starvation."

Queen's Honor List

LONDON (CP) — Two prime ministers, one at the centre of a controversy that may affect the 1978 Commonwealth games, were given special awards by the Queen today in a huge birthday and silver jubilee honors list.

At the same time the Queen announced that she and other members of the Royal Family will accept appointments as commanders of a number of Canadian military units.

Among awards to 875 persons — about 20 per cent larger than the usual honors list — Prime Minister Robert Muldoon of New Zealand was made a Companion of Honor while Prime Minister Eric Gairy of tiny Grenada received a knighthood.

A number of African countries have threatened to boycott the Commonwealth Games at Edmonton next year if Muldoon does not order New Zealand sports teams to stop playing against those from South Africa. Muldoon says it is up to the teams themselves to decide that point.

Generally, the list appears to be studiously non-political, with British Prime Minister James Callaghan, who advises the Queen on most of the honors, avoiding the selection of the kind of political friends that got his predecessor, Sir Harold Wilson, in hot water with the public.

The queen announced that she will assume the appointment as colonel-in-chief of the Canadian Forces military engineers branch.

The Queen Mother becomes colonel-in-chief of the Canadian Forces medical services.

Prince Charles is named colonel-in-chief of Lord Strathcona's Horse (Royal Canadians), the Royal Winnipeg Rifles, the Royal Regiment of Canada and the Air Reserve Group of Air Command.

Princess Anne becomes colonel-in-chief, Canadian Forces communications and electronics branch and of the Grey and Simcoe Foresters.

The Duke of Kent becomes colonel-in-chief, the Lorne Scots Regiment.

Princess Alexandra becomes colonel-in-chief, Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's).

The military appointments were listed in a supplement issued with the honors list.

The honors list created five new life peers, six privy councillors, two Companions of Honor and 38 knights. In addition to the 875 in the list, 254 received the British Empire Medal.

Australian entertainer Rolf Harris get the Order of the British Empire. He came to London as a penniless art student and now has his own television show. Earlier, he spent much time in Canada, particularly in Vancouver.

Harris, who already holds the Member of the Order of the British Empire, receives his new honor for "service to the performing arts."

An MBE goes to Miss Margaret Evelyn Steels, chief passport examiner for the British High Commission in Ottawa.

Pratap Chidamber Chitnis, born in London of Indian parents, is made a life peer, joining West Indian-born Lord Pitt in the House of Lords and is Britian's third colored life peer.

His new fellow peers are Philip Noel-Baker, formerly Commonwealth relations secretary and air minister; former British chief of defence staff Field Marshal Sir Richard Carver; Sir Eric Roll, Bank of England director and chairman of bankers S. G. Warburg, and Professor Kenneth Wedderburn of the University of London, an expert on industrial relations.

Labor's Baroness Wootton, 80, a veteran educationist, also is made a Companion of Honor.

Sea, Songs and Smiles

Perched high on the rocks of Box Island, above tidal pools packed with crabs and starfish and overlooking the majestic sweep of Long Beach, a host of small faces eagerly scanned the vast Pacific Ocean.

"Keep looking all of you, because there are whales out there," Parks Canada naturalist Jim Bennett told the 15 Grade 4 students from Elsie Miles Elementary School in Shawnigan Lake.

Then he grinned.

"Okay, what do you know about whales?"

And suddenly, without a cue from anyone, the kids burst into the chorus of Whales Have Tails, a happy little song written by their teacher Judy Latimer.

Whales have tails and they live in the sea,
Whales are mammals like you and me;
Whales are a wonderful sight to see,
So Please, save the whales.

If they had been able to remember every single word the young naturalist used to describe whales during his slide show the night before, or if they'd quoted straight from a biology textbook, those kids couldn't have told Jim Bennett anything he'd like to hear more about whales then they did in that chorus and verses that went with it.

As the voices rang out around the rocks and the small faces beamed with excitement and happiness, Jim was lost for words. He was so moved that it was some time before he could say anything. And when he did, it was to invite the class back to the naturelist headquarters to record their song.

Later, strumming their ukeleles this time and accompanied on the auto-harp by their dear friend Padre Pike, a 77-year-old ex-Canadian Navy chaplain who lives at Shawnigan, the kids made a very professional recording of Whales Have Tails, It's a Small World, and The Time to be Happy.

I don't think they could believe it when they heard themselves played back. And they were really thrilled when the naturalist told them that no longer would his whale slide shows be held in silence — that their songs would be used as background music.

And they were delighted when he said he'd learn the words of the whale song so he could teach other groups of youngsters to sing it around the campfires, and so the message would be spread.

max low

I can tell you, they left there one hell of a happy group of kids. That recording session ("Now you know what the Bachman Turner Overdrive feel like," Mrs. Latimer told them) was an extra bonus on a trip that I'm sure could not be beaten as a learning experience.

It is an experience, too, that is being made available to more and more students all the time.

"We get about four school groups a week right now," Bennett told me. "Mainly they are from Vancouver Island but some come from much farther afield.

This weekend, for example, there'll be a school from Toronto seeing the Long Beach section of the Pacific Rim National Park and next week we'll have a school group from Calgary here."

Taking groups of kids — and adults — on walks along the beach, through the rain forest and clambering over the rocks exploring the life in tidal pools, is only part of the naturalists' job. The rest of it includes keeping an extensive parks library of files and books, planning parks programs and writing pamphlets.

"Our part is not so much just being a teacher and showing them what's what," Jim explained. "Anyone can do that. We try to stimulate them and make them aware that there is a lot more to see, a lot more to enjoy.

"It's a really good experience for them because most people come from the city and they don't know how to experience the outdoors any more."

As far as the kids from Elsie Miles School were concerned, it truly was an experience to cherish.

As well as all the outings arranged for them, each packed his and her gear almost a mile up and down the steep, winding trail from the roadway to the new Schooner Campground, built just off the beach for tenters. And they must have run or walked miles and miles along the beach.

After four days of it, when it was time to go home, they left, a little weary perhaps but still excited by the adventure and, above all — happy. And they took with them the little song Padre Pike taught them:

The time to be happy is now,
The place to be happy is here;
And the way to be happy is to make others happy,

Breathalysers Err, Expert Tells Court

A local pathologist said in Victoria provincial court Friday that even under optimum conditions the machine which tests the breath of drinkers has a 15 per cent margin of error.

Dr. Kenneth Thornton, pathologist at Royal Jubilee Hospital and former president of the B.C. Association of Pathologists, was called as a defence witness in the case of Alan MacMinn, charged Feb. 19 with having a blood-alcohol reading over .08.

Judge Harold Alder later aquitted MacMinn.

Thornton said that under the best possible conditions a Borkestein 900 model of machine which tests breath samples can be 5 per cent high or low in measuring blood alcohol.

In the case beforee the court there were three factors which made readings of .16 and .15 obtained "completely invalidated," he said.

The potassium dichromate, used in the machine as an oxidizing agent which absorbs alcohol and changes color, had not been replaced in 18 months. He said he would change the solution at least every month and later testified "it might become useless" at six months.

The mouthpiece of the machine was not changed between the first and second samples of breath, with the possibility the second sample was contaminated by contents of the first, court was told.

And there was the possibility of an abortive sample of breath taken because of previous testimony to "huffing and puffing" by MacMinn during the breath tests.

While the measurements may be acceptable "in the real world of the police station," Thornton said they were "scientifically useless."

Use of the breath machine is based on the assumption everyone excretes alcohol at the same rate but the doctor said recent research has shown this is not so. The rate can vary by as much as 300 per cent.

Crown counsel N. K. Varma asked Judge Alder for an opportunity to consult with experts but defence lawyer Dermond Owen-Flood argued the Crown's case was closed and rebuttal evidence could only be allowed if the Crown was "taken by surprise."

Alder ruled in MacMinn's favor, saying the Crown should have anticipated the scientific testimony.

In acquitting MacMinn, the judge said not everything was done in the breath-testing according to procedure and he found it "very unsafe to bring in a conviction."

U-Pick? It's Berry Good Deal

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

U-Pick.

It may have a Madison Avenue ring to it but it's become a way of life for berry and crop farmers on the Saanich Peninsula.

Even farmers of the old school welcome the practice of allowing people on their acreage to pick their own berries and vegetables.

Take Dixon Holloway of 7068 East Saanich Road, as an example. He's president of the Saanich Fruit Growers' Association, a position he has held "on and off for 10 to 12 years."

"It saves the cost of packaging . . . some labor, not the full whack . . . and gives a little more profit . . . and a little more socializing," he says.

Holloway first started a U-Pick system on his farm 20 years ago when he couldn't get the price he wanted for a crop of tomatoes.

"U-Pick went over real good," he reports.

He now has an even split on sales — 50 per cent through U-Pick and roadside stands and the remainder, through wholesalers.

Holloway is a second-generation farmer — his father, the late Philip Holloway started to clear 100 acres in 1904.

"He cleared with blood, sweat and tears. From the time I was 14-years-old I could handle explosives and blowing up (tree) stumps and the team of horses to pull the stumps out afterwards," Holloway asserts.

Who are the U-Pickers who help cut costs for the farmers?

Holloway says 60 per cent of those who come to his farm are older people, probably retired, and 40 per cent are young people, often with families.

But he also employs commercial pickers, about 12 to 15 a day, four days a week.

"I hire all local Indians. They're quick and thorough and they never let you down," he explains.

When the Times visited the Holloway Farm U-Picking was over for the day so we, on Holloway's suggestion, visited the farms along Oldfield Road.

It was knock-off time at 6373 Oldfield, the farm of Albert and May McCarthy.

Mrs. McCarthy said they had been using the U-Pick system for "30 to 40 years" because "there's only so much two persons can do."

We watched as three U-Pickers made their way up from the three-acre strawberry patch and had their pickings weighed.

One of them, Joyce Lebold, 149 West Burnside, paid for the 27 pounds she'd picked, saying she'd eat some now, some she'd freeze and make jam with the remainder.

She's an old hand at picking berries.

"When I was a kid I used to pick loganberries at three cents a pound," she says laughingly.

She and her friend agreed U-Pick is a great way to go shopping and exercise in the fresh air at the same time.

For rookies at the U-Pick practice the provincial agriculture department has brought out a free booklet and map, listing 26 farms on the peninsula using the U-Pick system.

They can be had by writing the B.C. Ministry of Agriculture, Horticulture Branch, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B.C. V8W 227 or by phoning 387-5121, local 237 or 238.

Take it from Lebold, "You know what you're getting and how old they are."

U-Pick is also a great way to beat inflation.

Answers Sought In Sewage Cases

If a Sooke man can be prosecuted and jailed for ignoring an order to repair his septic tank then why aren't others who have received similar orders?

Frank Heinrich, president of a Metchosin-Colwood anti-pollution group aims to find out.

In an interview, Heinrich said he will take the matter up with the regional health board.

He's upset the board prosecuted Kjartan Oscar Gislason yet has taken no action against 16 residents in an Esquimalt Lagoon subdivision who received orders more than a year ago to fix up leaking septic tanks.

Gislason, 54, was sentenced May 27 to seven days in jail for failing to comply with a sewage disposal regulation requiring him to fix a sewage leak on property he owns at 1676 and 1682 Whiffin Spit. He had been ordered to make the repairs last Dec. 6.

"If a person is made to correct a problem in Sooke," said Heinrich, "then why aren't others forced to do the same thing in Metchosin?"

He said the 16 Lagoon residents were ordered March 24, 1976 to repair leaking septic tanks and given two months to complete the job.

But nothing has been done, he said.

PIZZA MUNCH-IN BRINGS IN CASH

A half ton of pizza baked up by the senior cooking class at Dunsmuir Secondary School Friday netted students a tidy profit but just how big won't be known until Monday.

School principal Harold Parrott said today when he left the school at 4 p.m. slices of the monster pizza — which students claim was the world's largest-ever — were selling like hot cakes.

More than $200 in sales — the equivalent of 800 slices — had been made, he said.

And the pizza-lovers had only consumed the outer edge of the 746-square foot whopper.

"They were inching their way towards the centre when I decided to go home," he said.

Students invested only $100 in the project — to purchase 1,000 pounds of charcoal. All of the ingredients, which would have cost $2,700 at the super market, were donated.

The money raised will go towards buying equipment for the school's Home Economics lab.

The students hope to have their achievement entered in the Guiness Book of Records.

The previous record was a pizza, cooked in southern United States, which measured 26 feet 3½ inches for an area of about 570 square feet.

More Status, Money Urged for UVic Sports

Task Force's Recommendations Studied

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

A University of Victoria task force recommends increases in both budget and status in an effort to improve a deteriorating extramural athletics program.

The report, presented recently to president Howard Petch, asks the university to accept extramural sports as an "essential and integral part" of the program and to provide more funds.

The task force, established by Petch last December to examine "serious problems" facing the extramural program, recommends that the extramural budget of $140,000 be increased by $58,000. The additional money would allow for an increase in coaching honoraria and provide more funds for teams to travel.

Extensive travelling costs have been cited as the main reason both rowing and track and field were dropped as major sports at UVic.

All levels of the university, including faculty, administration, the student body and alumni, are now studying the task force's report. The final decision, however, will probably be made by the board of governors later this summer or early fall.

In proposing an operating budget for extramural activities, the task force designates basketball (men and women), women's field hockey, rugby, soccer, volleyball (men and women), cross-country running (men and women) and gymnastics (men and women) as major sports.

The 11-member task force included representatives from virtually all university levels, including administration, staff, graduates, students and athletic coaches.

Co-chairmen were lawyers Ian Stewart, representing the Board of Governors, and Bob Hutchison, representing the UVic Alumni. Other members of the fact-finding group were Ted Sawchuck, director of Student and Ancillary Services; former Alma Mater Society president Alistair Palmer; Dr. Bruce Howe, chairman of the Physical Education division; Dr. Bill Gordon, Glenda Scott, Ted Zinkan, Rick Rollins, Dennis Davis and Ian MacLean.

Their report, compiled after 11 meetings, recommends that the university take over the entire funding of extramural sports. At present, extramural activity is paid for, in part, from an athletic fee of $7.85 per student levied by the AMS.

At the same time, the task force emphasized that the present intramural and recreational program be "maintained and enhanced."

The report also recommends that coaching positions be filled "whenever possible" from the faculty or staff.

With only one exception, coaches of the various extramural teams during the past year were recruited from outside the university. The lone exception is Ken Shields, a staff member who coaches the Vikings basketball team.

The report recommends the coaching budget be increased from $22,000 to $45,000.

The task force noted that coaching honoraria "now range from $300 to $2,000 per annum" and feels the stipends "do not adequately compensate for the time, effort and skill required from a coach who is dedicated to the pursuit of excellence."

Sawchuck, who served as secretary of the fact-finding committee, said Friday that skilled faculty members have been discouraged from coaching because of demands on their time to teach and conduct research.

And in cases where faculty members did undertake coaching assignments, they weren't always given "the proper credit" for their contributions.

The committee recommends that "where a member of faculty applies for and is appointed to a coaching position, the athletic department will provide payment for a replacement of up to one-third of the faculty member's teaching load."

Sawchuck stressed, strongly, that the recommendation is not meant to downgrade the coaches who have been recruited from the community.

"This university has enjoyed a fantastic response from the community," he said. "You don't get men like Gary Taylor, Mike Gallo and Brian Hughes . . . to name a few of our coaches . . . every day.

"However, the university cannot depend on getting that continued calibre of coaching forever.

It will be a long, long time before we get to the stage where we stop recruiting coaches from the 'outside'."

The task force also feels the extramural program should be separated from the intramural and recreational program. Both programs now are headed by Mike Elcock, manager of Athletics and Recreational Services.

The majority of the committee recommends that extramurals be guided by a director of athletics who can report directly to the president. The manager (Elcock) now reports to the SAS director (Sawchuck), who reports to the Dean of Administration (John Dewey), who reports to the president (Petch).

Supporters of that recommendation say the change is not being made "to detract from or reflect on the ability" of the change of command but will serve to "elevate the status of athletics."

That, in a nutshell, seems to be a major point behind most of the recommendations.

Unfortunately, the committee's report comes at an awkward time. It is being studied when the university is struggling for funds to continue, improve or expand existing facilities or programs.

Sawchuck admits the timing is "awkward."

"Our recommendations are associated with money — a lot of money. I'd think the final deliberations will be up to the board of governors.

"It (the report) does reflect a slightly different change in UVic's policy regarding sport.

"I doubt if all the recommendations will be accepted immediately. It may take a few years, but it gives the university some guidelines . . . and a chance to plan for the future," added Sawchuck.

Lacrosse Can Be Scary With Burrards as Foes

I guess Ward Sanderson will do the decent thing and resign before Western Lacrosse Association commissioner Roy Burton gets around to making his momentous decision on the brawl between Vancouver Burrards and Victoria Shamrocks at Kerrisdale Arena Tuesday. He might as well. He isn't doing anything for the game; and there aren't many people who can recall when he did.

It's a matter of record that he leads nearly all the penalty departments in the league record book, and whenever Burrards are involved in an altercation of any sort, the first question invariably asked is: Was Sanderson a part of it. It's news when he isn't. Last year was no different. It was nearly always Sanderson first. Burrards have a few others who can flout the rules as well, and do. But so do the Shamrocks. So do other clubs. But none with the consistency of Burrards. Why? Who knows? They are a good team, otherwise, and shouldn't have to resort to such tactics. And they aren't winning any fans doing it. It's not sport.

I think Chris Hall of the Shamrocks put it best from a player's viewpoint. Chris, who has played all sorts of sport, said: "It was scary; and I never felt that way in sport before. You never know what they are going to do. You have to be looking over your shoulder all the time. I play lacrosse because I like to play sport. But I like it to be fun. If it isn't fun it isn't worth playing. And it isn't fun playing against Burrards.

Coach Nirmal Dillon of the Shamrocks put it in perspective, too, when he said Tuesday's brawl "was more than just a fight.

"They were trying to hurt people, deliberately. Normally a fight's a fight and that's that. But not this time," he said. Dillon called Burrards "the travelling animal Show" and called for Sanderson's expulsion from the league. Rough words. True. But not new. "Burrards' tactics are always the same. Get the Shamrocks in a fight. We can't beat 'em playing lacrosse, but this way we got a chance."

From all reports there was absolutely no good reason why Sanderson had to take after Shamrocks' Ken King at the conclusion of Tuesday's game. King had put Sanderson into the boards earlier in what was described as a hard, but clean, check. Sanderson took King's number and when the game was over deliberately attacked him from behind.

Gerry Cadwallader went to King's rescue and he got jumped by some Burrard players for his trouble and the disgusting battle royal was on. Who started it. One guess.

And it's not only that old saying — "Burrards against Shamrocks, there's always trouble." Now chippy play is becoming a regular format at most other games.

Take Wednesday's game between Nanaimo and Victoria. There's usually enough tension present between these clubs to make for an interesting evening, but Wednesday, obviously because of what had happened Tuesday, the Shamrocks came out real testy.

The Timbermen were equally guilty in retaliation. Normal bumping in the corners and around the crease was nearly always cause for high sticking, or whatever. And it was a chippy performance and a terrible game for two periods. Even if the players weren't necessarily looking for trouble, they weren't backing off either. Sure, the officials were keeping the game under control, but would there have been that many incidents if a tighter rein on dirty play had been in effect earlier

It was a simple case of protect yourself at all costs and the players did. Who could blame them

Lacrosse can be a fine game when it is played the way it should — rough, sure, but without being vicious. And that's the way it's headed now. Downhill. Can you imagine what will happen if Burrards come in here next month with Sanderson in uniform. It could be a brawl to end all brawls. The Shamrocks feel that strongly about it.

Already somebody has been hurt and the injuries suffered by George Grover and Mike Walsh could easily have been much more serious.

Let's not let it happen again.

Now it's up to Burton to make a decision that will hopefully prevent a recurrence of Tuesday's incident. And he better make it good. Or he could blow the whole league. This is a game, not a blood letting.

I'm one who feels that fans would better appreciate fast, end-to-end action rather than the chippy, slashing tactics that are allowed today. And if there are those who persist in making a mockery of the rules and fair play, then run them out of the game. It's gone too far. And it's getting so, as Hall said:

"It isn't fun anymore; and if it's not fun, why should I play the sport"

Ditto for the fans, so good luck, Roy. It can still be a good game. It's up to you.

Great Day for Geiberger

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Al Geiberger fired a 13-under-par 59 that broke the all-time Professional Golfers' Association tour record for 18 holes in Friday's second round of the $200,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis tournament.

Geiberger rolled in an 10-footer for a birdie putt on his 18th hole to complete the best score ever in American professional golf.

The 39-year-old Geiberger, a former national PGA champion, played one stretch of seven holes eight under par on the 7193-yard Colonial Country Club course.

He may have been helped slightly by the so-called winter rules that were in effect. Because of winter damage to the course, players were allowed to lift, clean and place the ball in the fairways.

The old record was 60, set in 1951 by Al Borsch in the third round of the Texas Open at the Brackenridge Park Golf Course in San Antonio.

It last was tied by Sam Snead in the second round of the 1957 Dallas Open at the Glen Lakes Country Club.

The 60 also was tied by Bill Nary at El Paso Country Club in the third round of the 1954 El Paso Open; by Wally Ulrich at Cavalier Yacht and Country Club in the second round of the 1954 Virginia Beach, Va.; by Tommy Bolt at Wethersfield Country Club in the second round of the 1954 Insurance City Open; by Mike Souchak, again at Brackenridge in San Antonio, in the first round of the 1955 Texas Open, and, 20 years ago, by Snead.

All of those courses are shorter and considered much easier than the layout Geiberger played in humid weather with just a hint of a breeze rippling the surface of the lake between the first and 8th holes.

South African Gary Player had a 59 on a short course in the Brazilian Open three years ago, but no one before had ever broken 60 on the American professional tour.

Geiberger's round was, perhaps, as nearly perfect as can be played. He hit every fairway. He hit every green. He did not make a bogey. He did not have a "5" on his card. Perhaps his only lapse was on an eight-foot birdie putt that missed on the 14th hole, his fifth of the day.

He started Friday's play from the 10th tee, played that side in 30 and then ripped over the next nine in 29 strokes.

The key was a string of seven holes beginning on the 15th. He played those seven eight under par — four consecutive birdies, a pitch-in for an eagle three and two more birdies on putts of 18 and 20 feet.

"My big goal was to try to break (Bob) Goalby's record," Geiberger said. Goalby set the tour record of eight consecutive birdies in 1962.

Al needed a birdie on the 420-yard fourth hole to do it.

But he missed from about 12 feet, leaving the birdie putt short.

"I had to talk to myself then," he said. "I knew that one was gone so then I set my goal at 59, so I wouldn't have a letdown and shoot maybe 61 or 62."

He paused a moment.

"It seems ridiculous to talk in terms of numbers like that, doesn't it?"

Geiberger made one birdie in an opening round of par-72. Friday's total was composed of 11 birdies and an eagle three.

"This," he said, "is better than winning the tournament."

Geiberger, long noted as one of the game's best long iron players, went into a slump after winning the 1966 PGA national championship and didn't win again until the 1974 Sahara. He won twice in both 1975 and 1976 but was in a decline this year.

His best finish this season has been fourth at Colonial in Fort Worth, Tex., and he had failed to qualify for the final two rounds in six of 14 starts, including his last two.

Geiberger, with a 131 for 36 holes, leads by six shots over rookie Keith Fergus, who eagled the 18th hole for a 67 and 137. Another shot back was Player with a 71 Friday and Ray Floyd with a 65.

Mike Morley, Tom Weiskopf, Mike Hill and Woody Blackburn followed at 139. Weiskopf shot a second-round 68, Blackburn and Morley 70s and Hill 71.

First round leader Tom Storey blew from an opening 65 to a 76 and was 10 shots back at 141.

Vogel's Decision Expected Monday

Ray Haramboure won't mind setting a Western Canada Hockey League record.

He'll be the owner with the briefest stay in the game if Swift Current motel owner Ernie Vogel decides to buy the Victoria Cougar franchise.

Haramboure and business partner Lorne Williams bought controlling interest in the Cougars from Pat Ginnell last month. Then complications set in.

Williams, who had planned to serve as manager and president of the Cougars, was forced to back out on doctor's advice.

His associate says he (Haramboure) has neither the time nor the hockey background to run the team.

Enter Vogel, who has the time, the interest and the background. "Interested" in buying the team, Vogel met Friday with Haramboure and said he'll make a decision, "one way or another," by Monday.

Bob Briscoe, appointed manager after Williams' withdrawal, said the ownership picture should be clarified in detail by Tuesday.

Vogel said if he does buy the team, Briscoe would be retained "in some capacity and Gord Hahn will remain as trainer.

That leaves the question of a coach and Ginnell, somewhat suddenly, is back in the picture.

Ginnell and Vogel are personal friends. The Swift Current businessman said his preference for a coach "would be one with WCHL experience."

That indicated that former Victoria professional Andy Hebenton, Williams' choice as coach, may not be Vogel's choice.

Ginnell left the door open on returning as coach. He'll weigh any offer, said Ginnell, "because it doesn't cost anything to listen."

Tour of Canada For Sumo Champ

TOKYO (AP) — Ozeki Wakamisugi, winner of the Emperor's Cup in the Summer Grand Sumo wrestling tournament last month, will make a week-long tour of Canada starting June 16. He and stablemate Takanohan will perform a series of sumo demonstrations for Japanese-Canadians as part of the program commemorating the centennial of Japanese immigration to Canada.

'Waste Pitches' Put to Good Use

When's a waste pitch not a waste pitch?

Sooke's Ron Fedosenko got the answer Friday: When Bob Palmer of Molsons is at bat.

Palmer drove in all the runs with a single and a double and Dick Michaud took care of pitching honors at Central Park as the last-place Molsons upset leading Sooke 4-2 in Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League play.

No. 6 in the batting order, Palmer faced Fedosenko in the second and third innings with two runners on base each time. The Sooke hurler quickly breezed two strikes past the Molsons second baseman. He couldn't get the third one across.

Palmer tagged high "waste" pitches each time for solid hits.

Mark Perkins also had two hits for Molsons while Bob Wilson banged out a pair for Sooke.

Michaud, bombed for two runs and four hits in the first inning, allowed only two other safeties the rest of the way.

Hygrade blanked Labatts 7-0 while Travelodge defeated Castle Properties 6-2.

UCT Gains Final

Saanich UCT is "in" and Oakcrest Foods and Saanich Lions tangle tonight to determine the other finalist in the annual Greater Victoria Babe Ruth inter-league baseball tournament.

Sparked by the hitting of Randy Wickware, UCT edged Kamahap Esso 11-10 in Friday's semi-final at Bullen Park.

Wickware, a key producer in UCT's quarter-final victory Thursday, drove in four runs with a pair of singles. Rick Benn picked up the victory in a relief role.

Tonight's Oakcrest-Lions semi-final will be played at Layritz Park this evening, starting at 6:15. Sunday's final is set for 1 p.m. at Luxton Park.

Willows Relay Teams Crack Three Records

Keep your eyes on Patricia Wellman, Doug Mace and the relay crowd from Willows.

All were impressive as they accounted for eight of the 13 records established Friday in the 16th annual Greater Victoria elementary schools track and field meet at Centennial Stadium.

Running with remarkable finesse for their ages, Willows boys' relay teams accounted for three records. The Oak Bay school did it in winning the nine-year-old 4x100 in 59.8 seconds, the 10-year-old 4x100 in 57.9, and the open 4x100 in 51.6 seconds.

Wellman and Mace each set two records to highlight individual performances.

A Braefoot student, Wellman recorded the most spectacular performance of the meet by shattering the 800 metres record for 12-year-old girls.

Her time of 2:22.3 in the sizzling weather lopped a whopping 7.1 seconds off the old mark set in 1971 b Richmond's Ulla Hansen, now one of the province's premier middle-distance runners.

In her only other event, Pat also broke the high jump record of 1.49 metres with a leap of 1.50.

Susan Bullock of Willows also claimed a share of the record but had to settle for runner-up honors. She also cleared 1.50 metres but finished second because of more previous misses.

Mace, also of Willows, matched Wellman's double-record performance. He broke the open boys' shotput record with a heave of 14.26 metres and the 100-metre dash mark with a time of 12.6 seconds.

Monteray "B" boys 4x100 relay team in the 12-year-old division broke the oldest existing track record with a time of 52.9 seconds.

STARGELL'S NAME INSERTED TWICE IN LINEUP

Pirate Pilot Stuns Umpire

By The Associated Press

Chuck Tanner never thinks twice about putting Willie Stargell's name in the Pittsburgh Pirate line-up—but he's certainly never written his name in twice.

At least until Friday night.

The usually-attentive Tanner inserted Stargell into the lineup two times—in the fifth and seventh positions—prior to the National League baseball game with San Diego Padres.

And that opened Alvin Dark's eyes right away. The San Diego manager filed a protest, and was doubly insistent about it after Stargell himself blasted a three-run homer in the 11th inning for a 10-7 Pirate victory.

"That's one protest you cannot lose," boasted Dark, holding up his copy of the errant line-up card.

Tanner was a little embarrassed—but undefeated.

"I filled out the card and I'll take the blame, but I don't think the protest should be upheld," said the Pittsburgh manager. "It was just one of those things."

It may have been, but it certainly stunned Doug Harvey. Said the veteran umpire:

"Funny thing, huh? In 20 years, I can't remember seeing anything like it."

Harvey said he would make a full report on the matter to National League president Chub Feeney.

"It's a judgment call, and it's not mine to make," said Harvey.

In fact, Tanner meant to put Rennie Stennett in the No. 7 spot, not Stargell. Stargell drew a bases-loaded walk in the first inning and Bill Robinson followed with a two-run single to give the Pirates a 3-0 lead. Stennett then stepped up and hit into a double play.

"When he came to bat, Stennett substituted for Stargell," explained Dark. "So, we'll have to play the game over from that point with Stennett at bat and a pinch runner going in for Stargell."

There was less confusion in other National League games, as Cincinnati Reds belted Montreal Expos 13-1, Chicago Cubs turned back San Francisco Giants 3-1, Houston Astros outscored New York Mets 4-1, St. Louis Cardinals beat Los Angeles Dodgers 8-7 in 12 innings and Philadelphia Phillies defeated Atlanta Braves 7-5.

Pittsburgh and San Diego were tied at 7-7 going into the Pirate 11th when Dave Parker and Al Oliver hit singles and Stargell smashed his 10th homer of the season over the wall in left-centre.

In the American League, Frank Tanana, the sensational left-hander with California Angels, stayed abreast of Denny McLain's 31-victory pace of 1968, baffling Cleveland Indians on two hits for his 10th victory and fifth shutout of the season.

He needed only one hit and Bobby Bonds provided it, slamming a second-inning homer for the 1-0 victory.

In New York, meanwhile, Ron Guidry stumbled over his ninth-inning hex once again—but got one-pitch help from Sparky Lyle and the Yankees beat Minnesota Twins 4-1.

In other American League action, Baltimore Orioles beat Chicago White Sox 6-1, Toronto Blue Jays edged Seattle Mariners 4-3, Detroit Tigers defeated Oakland A's 6-4 and Milwaukee Brewers edged Kansas City Royals 4-3. Texas at Boston was rained out.

NOBODY BUT CHARLIE CAN EXPLAIN REASON

BOBBY WINKLES
. . . surprised by offer

OAKLAND (AP) — Bobby Winkles, the 13th manager hired by Charlie Finley, said it came as a total surprise when he was offered the Oakland A's job.

Jack McKeon, awakened Friday morning by a long-distance phone call from Finley in Chicago, said his firing came as a complete surprise.

Both men must have temporarily forgotten the track record of Finley, the baseball team owner who has changed managers 15 times in 18 years (giving Alvin Dark and Hank Bauer two terms apiece.)

"I asked him what I had done wrong and he just told me he felt a change had to be made," said a bewildered McKeon, adding that the last time he heard from Finley, three days earlier, the owner said: "I'm really proud of the job you've done."

It seems that no one but Finley knows why the change was made. The owner said: "I'm not going to go into details. But I like Bobby Winkles's enthusiasm, and knowledge of the game."

Winkles, 47, who served 1½ years as an A's coach after being fired as California Angels manager in 1974, took over an A's team which carried a 26-27 record into Friday night's game with Detroit Tigers. The A's lost their first game under Winkles 6-4 and are tied with Kansas City for fifth in the American League West, six games out of first place.

"In my heart, I know I did a good job," said McKeon. He was offered a job as administrative assistant to Finley but his first reaction was, "I probably won't take it."

Bucks Enjoy Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Milwaukee Bucks, as expected, picked two-time all-America centre Kent Benson of Indiana as the first selection in Friday's National Basketball Association draft of college talent and then immediately signed him to a six-year contract.

Benson, a 6-foot-11, 245-pounder, averaged 14.0 points and 7.5 rebounds a game in his career at Indiana, despite being hampered by injuries his last two years.

The Bucks had the first choice in the draft after finishing with the worst record in the Western Conference, then winning a coin flip with Kansas City Kings for the right to pick No. 1.

The 22 NBA clubs were to go through 10 rounds of selections, picking in inverse order of their won-lost records for the 1976-77 regular season. But because many trades involving first-round draft picks had been made, the actual order of selection in the opening round bore little resemblance to the standings.

Kansas City, having obtained the second choice in the draft from New York Nets in the Tiny Archibald trade, selected guard Otis Birdsong of Houston.

Then it was Milwaukee's turn again, the Bucks having obtained Buffalo's top choice in exchange for veteran centre Swen Nater and a lower first-round pick. They used the choice to take UCLA's all-America forward Marques Johnson, major college basketball's Player of the Year last season when he averaged 21.4 points a game for the Bruins.

Bucks also had No. 11 pick, obtained from Cleveland in a trade last fall and used it to pick Tennessee forward Ernie Grunfeld.

"I think we just got the best draft in the history of the NBA," said a happy James Fitzgerald, president of the

Chako Gets Share Of Tourney Lead

NORTH MYRTLE BEACH, S.C. (UPI) — Japan's Chako Higuchi, playing very deliberately and with little emotion, caught first-round co-leader Sally Little Friday to grab a share of the lead in the second round of the $150,000 LPGA championship.

Higuchi, one of the most popular female players in Japan but little-known in the U.S., shot a five-under-par 67 while Little, from South Africa, had a 71 as both went six under par at the halfway point of the LPGA's premier event.

Joyce Kazmierski, who shared the first-round lead with Little, led at seven under par going to the ninth hole. But she bogeyed No. 9, triple-bogeyed 10 after going into the woods and bogeyed 11 to put herself out of the running. She finished the day with a 76 for a two-day total of 143.

Judy Rankin, the 1976 LPGA player of the year, was three strokes behind the leaders at 141 after two days of play, shooting a 73 Friday.

Four strokes in back of the leaders was Pat Bradley, who fired her second straight 71. Tied at 143 with Kazmierski were Sandra Palmer and Kathy Whitworth, the LPGA's all-time money winner.

Canadians Sandra Post and Dale Shaw both survived the cut. Post carded her second 72 for 144 while the Victorian improved to 75 from an opening 78 for 153.

Bighorns Pick Coach

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Dave King was named head coach and Joe Arling assistant coach of the new Billings Bighorns of the Western Canada Hockey League, general manager Bob Strumm announced Friday.

Earlier this month, Strumm announced the transfer of the Calgary Centennials' franchise to Billings. There now will be three United States teams in the 12-team league — Billings, Portland and Seattle.

King, 28, and Arling, 25, both are natives of Saskatoon. King has coached six years in leagues in the Saskatoon area. Last year he was an assistant for Saskatoon Blades of the WCHL. Arling coached Saskatoon Blazers, a minor-league team, last year.

Romania Leads

BUCHAREST (AP) — Ilie Nastase and Dumitru Haradau posted victories Friday as Romania took a 2-0 lead over England in the best-of-five European A Zone Davis Cup tennis semi-finals. Nastase downed 25-year-old John Feaver 6-1, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 and Haradau defeated John Floyd 26, 7-5, 6-0, 6-1.

Title Grabbed In Late Rush

RICHMOND — Salmon Arm's Ken Reid closed with a rush Friday to become the first Interior golfer ever to win the British Columbia seniors championship.

Five strokes off the pace heading into the final round, Reid, at 55 a first-year senior, scored a two-over-par 74 at Quilchena Golf Club to finish the 54-hole test with a 228 total, three strokes better than his closest rival. Reid had a 78 and a 76 in his first two rounds.

Bill Simmons of Quilchena was the second-round leader with 149 but he blew to an 84 and finished in a three-way tie for third with 233.

Les Howard of Quilchena scored 79 for the second straight day and finished second with a 231 total. Art Ross of Surrey scored 75 to finish tied at 233 with Simmons and Doug Morrison of Capilano.

Bill Thompson of Victoria Golf Club, winner of the tournament in 1975, shot 80 Friday and finished tied for sixth place with Hank Seigfried of Fraserview at 235. Seigfried had a final round 79.

Defending-champion Hank Mitchell of Langara shot rounds of 80-78-79 for 237.

Colwood, Gorge Topple Leaders

Speaking of close races . . .

The run for honors in the Vancouver Island Senior Golf League became a "good one" Friday because of victories by Royal Colwood and Gorge Vale Golf Club.

Colwood upset Victoria 4½-1½ while the Gorge gang edged Glen Meadows 3½-2½. The results left Victoria and Glen Meadows tied for first, a mere half point ahead of Colwood. Gorge Vale moved to within one point of third place.

In Friday's other match, Cedar Hill defeated Uplands 4-2 to force a two-way tie for fifth place.

Results:

Gales Didn't Dampen Crew's Jubilance

Three Victoria counterparts of Don Quixote in the sailing scene set out to race in the 536-mile west coast race to Triangle Island and back a week today.

One had been sailing six months, another for three months and the third man was getting his first taste in the ocean-tester.

But unlike novelist Miguel de Cervantes' character, who tilted at windmills and at sheep which became armies in his mind, the three Victorians found the sea leaves nothing to the imagination.

The three men are Ron Morrison, of 1083 Redfern, Clarence Sinclair, of 1516 Camosun and Don Clark, of 1882 Duncan.

Morrison's 30-foot tall-rigged sloop Bebelle was one of five boats that started, of which only two finished — Dan Hughes' Maranda of the Royal Naval Sailing Association in Vancouver and Bill Gardner's Lucy Alice of Seattle.

Bebelle returned to the Inner Harbor on Thursday, her soaked cabin witness to the pounding she'd received. Her bearded crew, however, were exultant.

Although they hadn't been able to finish they'd experienced more live adventure than Don Quixote could have dreamed of.

Morrison told of the rations on which they'd sailed — made basic because they couldn't use the propane stove. It had sprung a leak. They'd satisfied stomach cravings with raw steak, marinated in wine; raw vegetables and cold canned food.

Salt water had got into the water tank so they quenched their thirst with beer.

Bebelle lost her RDF (radio direction finder) the second day out, during a gale which threw the set to the cabin deck. From then on they had to rely on land fixes.

"When the second gale came on we started taking water," Morrison said. "Then the depth sounder shorted out."

Morrison said the Canadian coast guard were "superb all the way, especially Tofino."

Knowing Bebelle was without RDF, the coast guard kept them informed of fishboats in the area that could help them fix their position.

Then the radio went and Bebelle could not receive.

Finally she reached Triangle Island in the teeth of a gale at night.

Clark on his first sailing trip told how they headed out to sea for 30 miles or so twice, only to fail to round the island on the inward leg.

"With no depth sounder or RDF we had to keep coming about and going out. But when we got close to shore we kept being nailed by the waves, some of them breaking 15 feet up the mast," Morrison said.

Morrison said he made the decision to drop out of the race when he realized that the gale-force winds were driving them further and further back on each rounding attempt.

The Spanish Don Quixote became a pathetic figure when, after his roamings, he finally faced himself ... and reality.

ITU Ratifies Thomson Pact

KELOWNA (CP) — Members of the International Typographers Union have ratified a new one-year contract with five Thomson-owned newspapers in British Columbia.

The agreement is retroactive to December 6, 1976, and is within anti-inflation guidelines of eight per cent, or 55 cents over one year, bringing the present hourly wage of $7.08 to $7.63.

The 60 members affected are employed at Kamloops Sentinel, Vernon News, Kelowna Courier, Penticton Herald and Nanaimo Free Press.

Donation Despite Protest

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Devonian Group will donate $800,000 to the city for the widening of the Stanley Park seawall for a pedestrian-bicycle path, despite protests from one of the city's alderman.

Al. Warnett Kennedy, in a telegram to the Calgary-based charity earlier this week, urged that the grant be postponed until a public meeting is held. He said he did not believe the project should go ahead until the public had a chance to express its views.

Council had voted 4-3 in favor of the project.

H. W. Meach, president of the Devonian group, said Thursday the grant would not be postponed.

Meach said the group, established in the 1950s with an endowment of $50 million, funds projects across Canada involving public parks, applied scientific research and historic preservation.

ECM Producion

BRUSSELS (AP) — Industrial production in the common market in March dropped 1.02 per cent from February, official figures showed Friday. In February, it had dropped 0.98 per cent from January. The year-to-year March production was up 5.4 per cent. In February it was up 6 per cent.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SIDNEY OMARR
SUNDAY, JUNE 12

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Money sectors of your Solar horoscope are activated. Key is to be positive about terms, meanings, to steer away from schemes based on fantasy rather than factual information. Rely upon your own initiative, powers of observation — and please do heed "inner voice."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Lunar cycle is such that you win, gain through surprise announcements, actions. One respected in community commends you. Prestige rises. Take advantage of "favorable climate." Cander, Capricorn persons are in picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What was hidden is revealed — to your advantage. Lost article is located. Secret doubts, fears can evaporate. You are rid of burden you should not have carried in first place. You feel "cleansed." It is good. Know it and act as if you know it.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on emotional responses, understanding through friendship, re-evaluating goals. New start in new direction is indicated. Leo, Aquarius, Scorpio persons could be part of your personal scenario. The number "1" figures prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can finalize agreement, especially in connection with home, property. Your are "challenged" and prestige could be on the line. Key is to consolidate, get counsel from one you respect. Don't jump into fray without adequate protection.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Travel, holiday spirit — these are emphasized. Social activity is accelerated. Gemini, Sagitarius and number "5" figure prominently. Your ability to convince, to persuade, to articulate truth is brought into sharp focus.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Past commitment commands attention — questions concerning cost, investment could dominate. Be direct. You can obtain answers and avoid loss — it's up to you. Aqquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons play key roles in scenario.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Quic': changes occur — what had been settled or regarded as status quo is shaken, reviewed and revised. Accent on response, public reaction, ability to sustain temporary setback. You're going forward, but some concessions are necessary. You'll understand!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on adjustment at home base or special arrangements affecting family. Taurus, Libra figure prominently. What had been a matter to be kept under wraps, not discussed, is likely to surge to forefront.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Impulse dominates. Logic takes back seat — member of opposite sex is involved. Rambunctious young person speaks up in positive manner. Friendship and money considerations could collide — result might be more favorable than could have been foreseen.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Conflict of interest may be in picture. Be aware and protect yourself. Accent on finish, property, costs, conclusions, response to directives. Capricorn is very much in picture and so is the number "8." You receive communication from "old associate."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Steer away from direct confrontations. Be versatile, take ring roads. Aries, Libra persons play key roles in scenario. Relative shakes off lethargy, wants you to join in a journey. You have obligation to finish what you have started.

IF JUNE 12th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are attractive, have sense of humor. You are fond of travel, food, and have a tendency to scatter your forces. Your appearance is more important to you than to the average person. Weight problem could exist. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play key role in your life. November will be a highlight month of 1977, a year which sees you making family adjustments, perhaps remodeling or changing residence.

Astrological Forecast for Monday, June 13

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Fiscal responsibility now is more important than in recent past. Know it and act accordingly. You are given added responsibility. Result is more pressure, but also a chance for greater reward. Welcome chance to benefit from older person's experience.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Finish rather than begin — strive for greater understanding, appeal, display and distribution. Aries, Libra and number "9" figure prominently. Cycle is high; lines of communication open for you. Cash flow, which has been impeded, gets along once again.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Light is thrown on areas previously dark, obscured, mysterious. Some of your fears are allayed. New start is indicated — "showy" Leo plays key role in your personal scenario. Yes, the creativity and romance factors are emphasized. You'll enjoy!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be conservative where finances are concerned. Be positive concerning basic values. Someone wants something for nothing — and you could be a likely target. Your intuition tells you a valid story — pay heed.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Social meeting could result in business or career opportunity. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons could figure in key roles. Be versatile, display sense of fitness — and humor. Accent on achievement, standing, prestige. Yes, you'll get green light for travel, progress.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Change is good; you have been buried in details, red tape, restrictions. Now, say yes to chance for variety, travel, the encountering of new persons, experiences. Aquarius, Taurus, Scorpio persons are in picture. Long-distance message provides stimulation, hope and optimism.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Obtain hint from Virgo message. Assert needs and desires. Applies especially in relationship with member of opposite sex. Basic requirements for task, assignment come into focus. Friend directs course which brings you valuable material.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go slow, seek harmony, make creative concession in connection with domestic situation. Accent on joint efforts, marital status. Windfall comes your way; element of luck or timing is your companion. Take advantage of it!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Indirect approach brings desired results. Accent on employment, basic tasks, nutritional intake, rest and recreation. You get emotional breathing room. Yes, there has been disappointment, but the wound heals.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Involvement is keynoted. If you're not serious, get out of the kitchen. Yes, the heat is on, especially where man-woman relationshpis are concerned. Creative juices flow — you can imprint your own style, personality. Yes, a significant change occurs and love is part of scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Finish what you start, seek ways of gaining better display, distribution for ideas, products. Aries, Libra figure prominently. Accent on solid structure, building, creating a situation that promotes ultimate security.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take a different path or road — dine out, experiment, steer away from one who consistently sings the blues. It is time now for some moonight and roses — highlight independence, originality, the excitement of discovery.

IF JUNE 13th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are rebellious, created your own destiny at an early age. You are restless, independent; your ideas border on the brilliant. You are capable of helping — even healing — people. Aquarius, Scorpio and Leo persons play important roles in your life. You'll be happier, beginning with October. You recently suffered a loss, following residence change or domestic adjustment. But you are on the road back — and riches and recognition could await you.

4 Great Dining Experiences

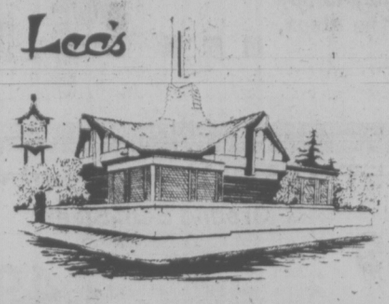
Jack Lee's



CHINESE VILLAGE RESTAURANT

"Serving the Chinese Food You Like!"
755 Finlayson Street
384-8151

Did you know that four of the world's most pleasurable dining experiences are located right here in Victoria? There's the Oriental experience at Jack Lee's Chinese Village, serving Chinese Food you like, and at the Japanese Village, where there's a master chef at every table. There's Chauney's for seafood delicacies from the ocean that surrounds us, and The Parrot House with its international cuisine, offering one of the finest views on Vancouver Island. All here in the capital city! Experience them all!

A master chef at every table! Steaks, chicken, and seafood, prepared in our own special way — more than a meal — a premier performance!

Accident Sparked Energy Cutback

HALIFAX (CP) — It began accidentally but it was soon discovered that the Nova Scotia Research Foundation's energy conservation program cut energy usage by about 10 per cent.

George Fraser, a spokesman for the foundation, said in an interview that it all began when a leak was discovered on the roof of its main building.

"Rather than simply repair the old one, we decided to upgrade insulation levels at the same time."

The foundation headquarters were reasonably energy-efficient when they were built in 1969.

The next step was to take a detailed look at where energy was being used and lost. It was found that the average thermostat setting was 72 degrees. Attempts to achieve a uniform reduction to 65 degrees throughout the electrically-heated building were only partially successful because personnel in the windy northern end of the building found the new setting too low.

A solution was found when technical officer Everett Messen developed a heat-control device which automatically turns down all thermostats to 50 degrees during nights and weekends. This enabled the foundation to have an average 24-hour thermostat setting of less than 60 degrees and still maintain comfortable working conditions.

Cost of the automatic turnbacks was $350. They resulted in annual savings of $4,500.

Another trick to saving energy was to shorten office drapes to prevent them from hanging over baseboard heating and thereby diverting heat away from the rooms and towards the windows.

The next step involved painting.

All hallways and rooms in the three-storey building were painted a light color.

"This alone, at no additional cost, cut lighting needs in corridors by about 40 per cent," said Eldon Gunn, a research officer at the foundation.

This saved the foundation about $1,200.

Other changes are being studied which might be costlier than those already carried out.

"We've done the easy and pretty obvious things," said Fraser. "This doesn't mean we can't do more to save money. We just have to calculate carefully the costs and benefits. But our experience clearly shows that a lot of energy is being wasted that need not be."

THE "SUCCESSFUL BUSINESS PERSON"

GEOFFREY SKINNER
Carrier of the Month

In the short period of time since February that Geoff has been a Times Carrier, he has established a fine record. He recently won a trip to Vancouver and has earned many prizes. Geoff plays short stop or catcher for the Evening Optimist team and much of his route profits are used to buy sports equipment. He looks forward to advancement to a larger route.

When a young person applies for his or her first full-time job, he or she is usually asked: "What experience do you have?" The successful newspaperboy or girl has a good reply to that question.

They can tell how they handled their own profitable route business. How they can get along with people. How they handled their own collections and did their own bookkeeping. How they gave good service to their customers.

It will not take a prospective employer long to realize that here is someone who has learned from practical experience and has enjoyed success through their own initiative and determination. Here certainly, is a young person who has the potential for continued success in whatever field he or she is given the opportunity.

LET US HELP YOU GET STARTED ON THAT SAME "ROAD TO SUCCESS" WITH PROPER GUIDANCE FROM ONE OF OUR DEDICATED AND EXPERIENCED DISTRICT MANAGERS OR OTHER SUPERVISORS.

Church-in-the-park starts Sunday

The 35th year of open-air gospel services in Beacon Hill Park will begin at 7 p.m. Sunday, Frank Hunter announced this week.

The services, sponsored by Park Services Interdenominational, will be held, rain or shine, at the Cameron Bandshell and will continue to the end of August.

Hunter, who originated the services 35 years ago, said they were designed to appeal to those who like to worship in the open air during the warm summer evenings and to persons just enjoying the beauty and peace of the park.

Each service will be conducted by a different church or group.

The opening service will be conducted by Parkdale Evangelical Free Church and the Free Methodist Church. Rev. Carl Klassen of Parkdale will be master of ceremonies and Rev. Mike Fyfe of the Methodist church will deliver the gospel message. Two people will give personal faith testimonies.

The musical program will include items by the joint choirs of the two churches and by the Word of Life, a singing group from the Parkdale church.

There will be vocal solos by Mike Fyfe and Reuben Peters, numbers by a trio of singers and an accordion solo by Larry Tuttle.

The next 11 services will be conducted by The Shantymen's Christian Association, June 19; First Christian Reformed Church, June 26; Victoria Citadel Corps, The Salvation Army, July 3; Victoria Alliance Church, July 10; First Church of the Nazarene, July 17; Central Baptist Church, July 24; Queens Avenue Apostolic Church, July 31; James Bay United Church, Aug. 7; Gosworth Road Community Church, Aug. 14; St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Aug. 21; Glad Tidings Pentecostal Church, Aug. 28.

'Nothing sinful in gambling'

HALIFAX (CP) — There is nothing sinful in a little gambling, says Msgr. Colin Campbell, vicar-general of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Halifax.

Campbell says he does not believe that scriptural arguments against gambling are convincing.

"In most cases they are general condemnations of evil and have to be stretched to fit the crime of gambling," he said.

"If we can spark a little bit of joy into this world we are adding something. It seems to me the fun and hilarity of playing and winning are harmless rituals in what can be a rather dull life."

'Stay aloof in missions'

OTTAWA (CP) — Rev. Glen Brown says he feels that missionaries are guests of the countries where they work and that it would be improper for them to identify with a particular political philosophy.

Brown, a teaching missionary in South Africa, told a conference at Metropolitan Bible Church that unrest in many African countries often puts missionaries in the middle of political struggles.

Durers replaced

Albrecht Durer woodcut of 1503-04 from Life of the Virgin series, titled Joachim and the Angel, is one of artist's works on show at Art Gallery of Greater Victoria until next Sunday. Gallery's collection of 19 Durers was stolen while on exhibition at University of Calgary's art gallery last summer. Eighteen have now been replaced with insurance proceeds.

Inter-church body urges pipe delay

The Project North section of the Victoria Inter-church Committee for World Development Education is urging all its members and others who want to see northern pipeline development postponed for 10 years to write Prime Minister Trudeau and their MPs.

In a letter to Trudeau, mailed this week, the committee says it is "imperative that no pipeline whatsoever be constructed in Canada's North before the Indian land claims have been justly settled.

"We are concerned about the serious cultural, economic and environmental disruptions that will occur as a consequence of building pipelines in northern Canada," the letter says.

"We believe sincerely that the Mackenzie Valley pipeline should be postponed for 10 years as recommended by Mr. Justice Berger in the Report of the Mackenzie Valley Pipeline Inquiry: Volume One."

The drafting of the letter followed a three-day conference in Vancouver at the end of May and a public meeting in Victoria's Holyrood House last week which drew more than 400 people.

"Response was excellent and 100 people signed up as wanting more information and offering help," said Alex Jardine, member of the Victoria inter-church committee.

Jardine said the group was against building of a pipeline in southern Yukon near the route of the Alaska Highway as well being against such construction in the Mackenzie Valley.

Other points made in the letter were:

- The life, wellbeing and future of the Indians who live in the Northwest Territories and the Yukon will be upset for a long time if pipelines are constructed in the lands they live on.
- The prpposed pipelines would convey American gas to the U.S. and would not bring benefit of any consequence to Canada.
- The Americans are quite able to transport their gas to their country through their own territory and in their own ships.
- There is sufficient gas in Alberta to provide for the needs of Canadians for many years.

"Finally," the letter says, "is there a need to construct a pipeline in northern Canada to transport gas before the land claims are settled?"

"Surely, Canadians must demand time to enable you, sir, and your government to make reasonable arrangements to accommodate the problems of building a pipeline before any work starts on any pipeline.

"We urge a moratorium as recommended by Justice Berger."

Member of the committee met with Conservative MPs Allan McKinnon and Donald Munro to discuss their concerns last week.

Members of the public who want to write the government or help the committee can reach Jardine at 383-7614 or phone D'Anna Carson, 652-2819 or Doris Bergbusch, 382-3032.

Anglican, Lutheran, Roman Catholic and United churches are involved in the group working for a moratorium.

St. John's Anglican to host two recitals

Two organ recitals have been planned by Edward Norman, music director of St. John's Anglican Church, to be held at 8 p.m. June 15 and 22, both Wednesdays.

The first recital will be given by Paul Halley, who has been assistant organist at Christ Church Cathedral for the past year. In that short time he has gained a fine reputation for his recital and concert work. He is leaving shortly to live in Ottawa.

The second recital will be given by the noted American organist Ennis Fruhauf of the University of California at Riverside. Admission to each recital is by program available at the door for $2.

On the following Wednesday at 8 p.m. Boyde Hood, outstanding trumpeter with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra and the faculty of music at the University of Victoria, will give a farewell recital with organist Norman. Hood will leave soon for a year's sabbatical in the U.S.

Perspectives

New religious movements have become almost epidemic in recent years — although some of them can be described as religious only in the broadest sense of the word.

Some of these movements are breakaways from the churches and appeal to people who find ordinary church-life unsatisfying and unhelpful. But most of them seem to have no ties with conventional religion and their appeal is to people, especially the young, who yearn for something firm and authoritative around which to organize their lives, something that will help them cope with the anxieties and confusions of life today.

Some of these movements are primarily enterprises in training people in meditation, and many have found them helpful in coming to terms with their own motives and tensions. Others seem to be primarily enterprises in psychological technology, but some of them have an esoteric metaphysic or semi-secret mythology which is revealed only to persons who get through the initial stages of a program.

Others are expressions of oriental religions — often suitably edited and amended for western consumption — and they profess to convey to their initiates a deep wisdom, which is expressed in colorful rituals aand devotional disciplines.

In some of these movements there are elements of secrecy, with the secrets disclosed to adherents on a progressive basis — often in classes which must be paid for, and with some of them the cost of instruction is quite high.

Some of these movements seem to be very profitable for their leaders — or proprietors. The role of the spiritual entrepreneur in our society has not yet been comprehensively investigated, but some work is being done by sociologists and psychologists.

Many of these new movements are sustained by a dogmatic package of metaphysics and mythology and discipline which makes even the most dogmatic segments of the churches seem rather flabby. Leadership in these movements tends to be authoritarian— and a smiling, soft-spoken leader can be as toughly authoritarian as a noisy, muscle-flexing bully.

Here is the secret of their success: a tidy, authoritative package, with everything necessary provided and no loose ends, can be very comforting to persons caught in anxiety and confusion and painful feelings of emptiness. Part of the comfort probably is in feelings of superiority to the uninitiated.

These new movements do give — for a time, anyway — their adherents assurance and comfort and a sense of belonging and some healing for their anxieties. They do things for persons which biblical faith can do, which biblical faith does for many.

But in our time the churches have tended to falter in making available the resources in faith and in training persons in the devotions and disciplines of faith.

The churches must not dismiss these new religious movements with cheap sneers. They must recognize that their success is a challenge to the churches that they show, in very practical and credible ways, that in biblical faith there are resources which help persons cope with all that life thrusts at them.

Army veterans to play here

The Salvation Army Reservist Band of Vancouver, whose members average 70 years of age, will visit Victoria Citadel next weekend.

The band, under the leadership of bandmaster S. G. Collier, was formed five years ago. The musicians used borrowed and second-hand instruments until a New Horizons grant in 1973 made possible the purchase of new instruments and blazers.

The band plays in nursing homes and senior citizens' homes and at various functions. In the last year the band took part in more than 80 musical programs.

This is the group's second visit to Victoria. The public is invited to all programs. The band will play at 3 p.m. next Saturday at Matson Lodge and at 7:30 p.m. at the Citadel as well as at worship services at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. next Sunday. There will be no admission charge.

Injured priest named chief

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — A minister was named president of the Hamilton Conference of the United Church of Canada while he was in the intensive care ward of Brantford Hospital. Rev. George D. Young was injured when a tree being pushed by a bulldozer fell on him and broke two ribs, puncturing a lung.

Joint service for jubilee

HAMILTON (CP) — A joint service by Anglican and Roman Catholic churches will be held Sunday to honor the Queen's silver jubilee. It is the first time the congregations have joined together for a service, which will be attended by Lt.-Gov. Pauline McGibbon.

CHURCH CHRONICLES

Horsemen's service set

The seventh annual Horsemen't Service at St. Stephen's Anglican Church, off Mount Newton Crossroad, will be held at 11:15 a.m. Sunday in the grounds of the church.

Riders with their horses as well as non-riders attend the annual outdoor service.

Several years ago Rev. Ivan Futter said he decided to include horses in a special service after several members of the church said they couldn't attend church because they had to exercise their animals.

Mrs. Claire Lasher of Spokane, Wash., will address the 11:24 a.m. Tuesday luncheon of Women Aglow at the Princess Mary restaurant. Mrs. Lasher will also speak at the retreat of the interdenominational women's organization at Nanoose Bay from Friday to Sunday. Resservations may be made at 477-3142.

Dr. Wee Chong Tan, who teaches chemistry, philosophy, biology and religious studies at Pearson College, will preach at 9:45 a.m. Sunday in Cordova Bay United Church and at 11:10 a.m. in Gordon Head United Church. Dr. Tan is also an honorary member of the staff of St. John's Anglican Church, Quadra Street.

Rev. Gordon Patterson will be inducted as pastor of Western Community Baptist Church, serving the Langford-Metchosin area, at 7 p.m. Sunday, June 19, at Emmanuel Baptist Church, mother church of Western Community Baptist. Rev. Phil Collins, Baptist area minister, will officiate and Pastor Alan Turner of Emmanuel will preach.

Rev. James Barton, former pastor of Douglas Street Baptist Church and now at First Baptist in Brandon, Man., will become pastor of Elk Lake Community Baptist Church in July.

Dr. Philip Potter, general secretary of the World Council of Churches, will visit Vancouver from Oct. 22 to 24. Arrangements for the visit are being co-ordinated by Rev. Harold McSherry, vice-president of the Council of Christian Churches.

First Baptist Church, Port Alberni, will hold its 35th anniversary and reunion the weekend of July 9 to 11 and is asking former members planning to attend to have their registrations in by June 24. Registration forms and programs are available at Emmanuel Baptist Church.

A sermon in song will be presented by Jim and Mary Jane Sellers of Fort Wayne, Ind., at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, June 16, in Victoria Alliance Church, 1792 Townley.

Sellers, a bass baritone recording artist, is known as the regular soloist on the Alliance Hour and the Reformed Hour radio broadcasts as well as a guest artist on the 700 Club television show. His wife, Mary Jane, will join him in vocal duets and as piano accompanist.

The Sellers give personal testimonies and invite audiences to sing along with them.

One Up, but More to Go

Was that really only wind that rustled the grasses underfoot and tossed the hair of the group of people gathered outside UVic's MacLaurin Building on Wednesday?

Was not some of the sibilance the sound of withheld breath being exhaled in a collective gust of satisfaction and reassurance as the first sods were ceremoniously turned to begin construction of the new music wing?

Small wonder if it were so, for the sense of elation, the buoyancy that comes with the successful resolution of long-held tensions and frustrations was obviously shared by everyone present, from music department chairman Phil Young, happily wielding the shovel, through members of the music faculty present, to those who were simply friends and well-wishers.

Nine months ago the music department, which has been awkwardly and defeatingly crowded into the MacLaurin Building since its inception, was in despair following the Universities Council's published recommendations concerning allotment of the cash flow to the province's three public universities.

The recommendation left UVic's music wing, a long-standing priority and accepted as such at all levels, in limbo while proposing a passive $8 million multi-purpose structure at Simon Fraser.

It's the result of actions taken at that time by Uvic president Dr. Howard Petch and interested persons awakening public opinion, and through the response of Education Minister Dr. Pat McGeer, that Wednesday's happy occasion with all that it augurs for the future, occurred.

By late 1978 the crowding, confusion, lack of privacy, noise invasion, and total absence of facilities for development, will be things of the past.

However, this is an outcome that is, unfortunately, all too rare in the area of arts and cultural things.

Time and time again in my experience, something of value to this area and its people has been lost because there were no funds forthcoming to keep it functioning. This applies not only to the arts, but to other subjects as well.

There is no way, of course, that finance committees can entertain all the requests for funds that come their way. What is unfortunate is that they often among them do not possess the expertise to assess the value of applications in specialized areas.

It is naturally up to the applicants to make clear, well-argued case, but even the best of briefs can go unread or fall on barren ground as far as imagination or understanding is concerned.

There have been many people in public office hearabouts who would as soon take a thousand dollars out onto Centennial Square and make a bonfire of it as give it to an arts organization.

They theorize that it's the same thing: You give money to a bunch of musicians, actors, artists — whatever — you're removing it from all practical and meaningful usage!

In many cases the rationale could not be more contradictory of the fact.

Let me give as an example a request recently made by the Shawnigan Summer School of the Arts to the City of Victoria. I believe the sum asked for was $3,500, the purpose to assist the organization in staging at McPherson Playhouse, a series of Sunday evening concerts by members of the school's notable international faculty.

The request was turned down and the rejection letter demonstrated a lack of comprehension in "regretting" that help could not be given for "your school".

No help was sought for the school, which is funded by a $65,000 B.C. Cultural Fund grant, Canada council and other sources. Obviously no one had stopped to realize that the whole of the postage-stamp sum of $3,500 would end up back in city coffers or circulating in the area.

No one had argued that as this is the capital city where the distinguished school is located (much to the envy of several mainland centres), it would be totally justifiable to make some such token acknowledgement of appreciation of its existence here.

Why appreciation? Because the Shawnigan School is an ongoing affair, now in its sixth season, that purchases goods, catering services and accommodation, that attracts brilliant people here from all parts of the world and keeps them here for five to six weeks of the summer.

It enhances the city's growing reputation as a cultured as well as a beautiful residential and resort area, and it attracts considerable money that would not otherwise enter the economy.

Caring citizens should be doing what they can to encourage its continuity here and official Victoria should be ashamed to be so chintzy, especially when most of us could point to the spending of that much money and more on objectives of inferior significance.

Loss of the Shawnigan Summer School would be a black eye for this city, but even more calamitous would be the loss of any setback for the Conservatory of Music.

This year-round institution with its rare and wonderful spirit, the tremendous influence it has on the lives and futures of the hundreds of young people who pass through its doors, and the attention and admiration it has fostered across Canada and abroad, has become an essential and richly productive industry.

The Conservatory's space problem is every bit as severe and crippling as UVic's. Housing must be found for it and all government levels shoud bear this in mind. If space can be found grant monies from various deep wells will surface to assist in neccessary adaptation.

Let's hope the next sod to be turned will be for the Conservatory, though it be a sod in the grounds of an existing building of some vintage.

Opera Society Meeting

The annual general meeting of the Vancouver Island Opera Society will take place at 8 p.m., Wednesday at Cridge Hall of the Church of Our Lord. The meeting will provide opportunity for anyone interested to join the fast growing organization.

The VanIsle Opera will be producing Mozart's The Magic flute in September and plans to mount Humperdinck's Hansel and Gretel in February, 1978.

Membership forms can be obtained by calling 385-0222.

ACTRESS Domini Blythe won praise this week for her portrayal of Miss Julie in the Strindberg play of the same name which opened Wednesday at Ontario's Stratford Festival. Miss Julie is a headstrong young aristocrat who has never fully come to terms with love.

ORGAN RECITALS

First of two organ recitals at St. John's Church, Quadra, to be given next Wednesday and the following Wednesday, June 22, will feature Paul Halley, assistant organist at Christ Church Cathedral for the past year, and soon leaving the city for Ottawa.

Halley has rapidly gained a reputation as an organist of extra-ordinary gifts and virtuosity, and his associates greatly regret that he is leaving the profession of music as well as this city.

His recital on the beautiful St. John's organ will begin at 8 p.m.

On June 22 the recitalist will be a noted American organist, Ennis Fruhauf. Admission to each rectial is by program at $2.

Boyde Hood, first trumpet with Victoria Symphony Orchestra for several years, a member of UVic faculty of music and of the professional Western Brass, will also be giving a farewell performance — though hopefully a temporary one — at St. John's on June 29. Hood will leave soon for a year's sabbatical in the United States. He will be accompanied at the organ by Edward Norman.

Star Students Perform Organ Festival at Hotel

Sunday's student concert at Victoria Conservatory of Music is labelled "Principal's Choice," and the selections principal Robin Wood has made provide a small sampling of some of the best work by a few of the most promising students in this year's enrolment.

Walter Prossnitz will perform a challenging work by Franz Liszt, the Fantasy and Fugue on the letters B.A.C.H. The string trio that reached the Provincial Finals consisting of violinists Mark Neumann, David Lowe and Rick Westmacott; Bob Tweten, junior piano champion in Victoria and a finalist and runner-up in the Provincial Festival; pianist Monica Pfau, a festival multi-winner; a representative from the speech department and some wind players are others who will be performing.

The program will begin at 2:30 p.m. A limited number of tickets are available at the conservatory, 1050 Joan Crescent.

Parachute Record

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Soviet parachutist Valentina Zakoretskaya has become the first woman in the world to make 6,000 parachute jumps, Tass news agency said Friday. It said Zamoretskaya reached the mark at an international competition in Sofia, Bulgaria.

MUSIC DEPT. STAGES UVIC CONCERTS

After rumors that there would be no summer series of concerts at the University of Victoria this year, a modest budget has been allocated and the music department's Lanny Pollet has organized five concerts, three of them pairs and two singles.

The concerts will take place on Tuesdays and Thursdays during July, the first three being premiered on the Tuesday and repeated on Thursday. Beginning July 5 and 7 with a chamber orchestra concert including works by Handel, Hanson, Mozart and Bach, the next pair will feature a full recital by cellist Linda Hougland-Daniels. Ms. Daniels will play the cello sonata by Rachmaninoff among other things.

Number three will be an all-Bach concert which will feature the now topical "Coffee Cantata" with Catherine Young, soprano, and Rory Hammond, tenor, as soloists.

Single performances on the final Tuesday and Thursday will consist of a concert by the Koto Ensemble of Greater Vancouver, and a piano recital by pianist Robin Wood, whose program will include works by Chopin and Samuel Barber.

Soloists with the chamber orchestra will include Kathryn Lily, harp; Lanny Pollet, flute; John Loban (Vancouver) violin; and Erich Schwandt, harpsichord.

The concerts will take place in the MacLaurin auditorium at UVic at 8 p.m.

Rosalynd Carter Ends Latin Tour

CARACAS, Venezuela — Rosalynn Carter has arrived in Venezuela, the final stop of her seven-nation Latin American tour, where she is discussing the problems of underdeveloped countries with President Carlos Andres Perez. She arrived Friday from Colombia, where she talked with President Alfonso Lopez Michelsen about ways of halting Colombian drug traffickers who smuggle an estimated $500 million worth of drugs a year into the United states.

Venezuela's first lady, Blanquita Rodriguez de Perez, and Foreign Minister Ramon Escovar Salom greeted Mrs. Carter at the airport. Mrs. Carter returns to the United States Sunday.

Rolls Goes to Zsa Zsa But It's All in Pieces

LOS ANGELES — A judge ordered Zsa Zsa Gabor's ex-husband Jack Ryan Friday to return to her the parts he stripped from her Rolls-Royce. Ryan, inventor of the Barbie Doll, dismantled the car shortly before they divorced because he said they had agreed to divide the proceeds of the restored car. He took five wheels, five tires, the front bumper and five wheel covers — about $7,500 worth of parts.

TORONTO — Contralto Maureen Forrester sang after receiving her honorary doctorate of music at the University of Toronto on Thursday and was given a standing ovation. Miss Forrester was described by Prof. Ezra Schabas as the finest living contralto and what one looks and hopes for in a performing musician.

LOS ANGELES — ABC ordered Charlie's Angels to halt production Friday pending resolution of the producer's lawsuit against Farrah Fawcett-Majors, and a spokesman for the network said it may also file suit against the actress. Spelling-Goldberg Productions shut down production as it was completing the first episode for the fall season without Miss Fawcett-Majors.

VALENCIA, Calif. — If you think marriage doesn't have its ups and downs, consider the wedding of David Baysinger and Linda Crane. The two 29-year-olds, describing themselves as "rollercoaster freaks," were married Thursday while riding the rollercoaster at Magic Mountain. They were pronounced man and wife as they hurtled along upside down at the top of the ride's 360-degree loop.

NEW YORK — A gold replica of the Ten Commandments, mounted in amethyst, was awarded to Elizabeth Taylor on Thursday by the B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation League women's division for her "identification with all peoples and their struggles." "I care about people," the film star said in accepting the Rita V. Tishman human relations award at a star-studded luncheon. "When you do care, you do something about it — that's what makes life worth living."

TIPTOED AWAY

ORLANDO, Fla. — Tiny Tim says he wasn't missing, he was just being discreet.

But the singer, known for this falsetto rendition of Tiptoe Through the Tulips, admitted Friday he did "tiptoe out of Honolulu fast."

His hosts were on their honeymoon, and Tiny Tim said he wanted to leave them alone.

"I couldn't take all my stuff with me, so I packed everything in one shopping bag and got out," he said.

MR. EXCITEMENT NOW FORGOTTEN

MEDFORD, N.J. — Singer Jackie Wilson, once billed as Mr. Excitement for his flashy style and high-geared performances, now lies bedridden in a convalescent home, unable to speak or to feed himself.

Wilson, a top artist for nearly two decades, marked his 43rd birthday Thursday at the Medford Leas Retirement Community, nursing home here.

He receive six birthday cards.

Wilson, whose hit songs include Lonely Teardrops, Higher and Higher, and To Be Loved, suffered a heart attack as well as brain damage when he collapsed on a nighclub stage 21 months ago and lapsed into a coma.

Since then, he has been in three hospitals and three nursing homes or convalescent centres.

He undergoes rigorous physical therapy for several hours each day. The official prognosis is uncertain.

Wealthy Widow's Friend Wins Contest of Will

TEWKESBURY, England (CP) — A village policeman living in this picturesque Gloucestershire town has learned that he can keep the £200,000 fortune left him by a wealthy widow.

A High Court judge ruled that, although the 77-year-old widow fell deeply in love with 45-year-old Sergeant Ken Davies, the policeman had not influenced her when she changed her will in his favor.

The decision came after a lengthy court wrangle in which a relative and four British charities contested the will of Violet Salmon who lived in a 15-bedroom 18th-century mansion set in 500 acres of choice land.

They claimed that Mrs. Salmon was mentally ill when she rewrote her will after meeting Sergeant Davies.

"This court case was to vindicate my reputation—not to bring me wealth," the policeman said. "But I have now retired from the force, having completed my service and shall look for a home for myself and my family.

"Then I shall devote time to my artistic inclinations such as music, painting and poetry especially poetry. I have a roughly-compiled book of poems, many of them inspired by the feelings shown to me by Mrs. Salmon and they mean a lot to me."

In a 24,000-word judgment, Mr. Justice Walton found that Mrs. Salmon was not mentally ill.

"She was a lonely widow with a strong personality and she fell head-over-heels in love with Sergeant Davies," the judge said.

"Sergeant Davies fell completely under her spell. The bitterness came after Mrs. Salmon died, leaving a large sum to the sergeant. Four charities and a distant relative challenged the legacy, claiming she was unfit.

"She did suffer from some delusions," the judge said, "but they were not likely to influence her in the making of her will."

He said this was the story of a lonely old lady craving company and being drawn to a man who genuinely shared her interests. The sergeant was a "sensitive artistic soul not an opportunist or a fortune hunter.

Mrs. Salmon was the widow of a wealthy retired colonel, who died in 1968. She continued to live alone in a large mansion, haunted by the past.

Her first meeting with Sergeant Davies was in 1970 when she called police to say there were intruders in her grounds. From then on she telephoned him 10 times a day, the judge said.

The sergeant is married and has two grown-up sons.

Police Hunting Gandhi's Son

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — Arrest warrants were issued Thursday for Sanjay Gandhi, son of the former Indian prime minister Indira Gandhi, and six other persons, Samachar news agency reported. They came after a criminal complaint against Sanjay and the others lodged by an industrialist alleging wrongful confinement to extort his property and cause damage to property.

Bag of Letters And Curiosity Traces Family

Mr. and Mrs. William Turgoose settled in Saanich in 1864. Grandson Bill (below) traced the couple's descendants — 211 are living

A Saanich Reunion

elizabeth forbes

They gathered, one hundred strong, at the history-filled Saanichton Log Cabin, last Sunday.

The direct descendants of William and Emma Turgoose, pioneer residents of the distrıca.

There were babies, school-age children, teen-agers, younger and older marrieds with their wives or husbands and single men and women, representing, in all, six generations of the Turgoose family.

It was the first Turgoose family get-together. Made possible through the determined efforts of Bill Turgoose, a grandson of that pioneer William who bought acreage at the corner of Old East Saanich Road and Mt. Newton Crossroad, back in 1864.

Bill Turgoose's dedicated interest in family history was further shown (much to the delight of everyone at the gathering) in a series of neatly chronicled booklets he had compiled on the genealogy of various branches of the family represented at the gathering and also on the original William and his wife, Emma Pope.

These were on view at a long table in the Log Cabin, and there was never a moment throughout the afternoon when they were not being thumbed through and carefully read.

Bill started this project some six years ago after he found a collection of letters that had belonged to Emma Turgoose, amongst the effects of his mother, Mrs. Fred Turgoose.

"I remembered those letters as a boy," he says. "They were safely guarded in a neat canvas bag. I was interested then and even more interested when I looked at them again.

"So I started sorting the letters into dates and also into branches of the family they mentioned."

He checked and re-checked those letters. Wrote to descendants wherever he could find them, to help fill in the gaps.

Gradually a pattern appeared—and it was then he started to compile the booklets.

Today, those original letters have an album all to themselves. There is also one for old-time photos.

Dates have been verified. Each booklet has been correctly titled for the branch of the family it chronicles. Descendants are named in careful, hand-printed letters, right down to the present year.

Eventually, of course, Bill hopes to see younger members of the family take over the work of keeping these chronicles up-to-date.

At present, however, he will continue his research into Turgoose history.

"It's become an absorbing hobby," is the way he puts it. "I'm working, right now, on some records that go back into the 1750s."

The first William Turgoose came to the eastern United States from England in 1851 and 10 years later travelled overland with a brother Isaac, to Sacramento, with a wagon train and bringing 23 horses.

They sold those horses, with the exception of two teams, and came on to Victoria, where they worked as teamsters on the building of Esquimalt Road for a winter, before setting off to Barkerville and the Cariboo gold rush in the spring of 1862.

Up there they bought into the famed Raby Claim, did well, and sold out again two years later.

William came back and bought the Saanich acreage before going off on a visit to England. On the return trip he stopped over in Illinois to marry Emma Pope.

They returned to Victoria, June 3, 1865, (the day King George V was born) and immediately went out to the Saanich place.

In the following years seven Turgoose children were born and grew up there.

Fanny, the eldest, remained a spinster. Fred married Christein Christianson; Emma became Mrs. Colin Merkley; Annie, Mrs. William D. Michell; Carrie, Mrs. Raymond D. Pope; Lottie, Mrs. Robert M. Stewart and Winnifred, Mrs. John L. Brooks.

Today, their direct living descendants, with husbands and wives, number 211.

Eldest of those descendants at the gathering last Sunday was Willard Michell. Others in the senior citizen category included Wardlaw Stewart, Walter Brooks, Roy Pope and Bill Turgoose.

Youngest in the crowd, and the one who travelled the greatest distance to attend the reunion was five-month-old Stefanie.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Mitchell of Delta Junction, 110 miles south of Fairbanks, Alaska, and a great-granddaughter of Fred Turgoose.

Two-year-old Ralph Raymond Price of West Saanich, a great-great-great grandson of William and Annie Turgoose, was proudly introduced by his great-grandfather, Ralph Michell.

Great-grandchildren of the pioneer couple included two-year-old Andrew Raymond Demeter and Laura Lee Hagar, 14, of Victoria, descendants of the Pope and Stewart families respectively, also five-year-old Justin Brooks of Crofton, B.C.

It's interesting to note that Mrs. William Turgoose's parents, Abraham and Sarah Pope, came from Illinois in 1874 to join her on the Saanich Peninsula. He bought acreage at Mt. Newton and West Saanich Roods and opened a carpenter shop where he specialized in making furniture.

They celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in May, 1878.

A daughter Betsey, who came with them, married John Henderson, then owner of the Mt. Newton Hotel, close to the Pope acreage.

Five years after William Turgoose died in 1885, his widow Emma married Edmond Sadler, also a Saanich pioneer.

Today, they are all sleeping in historic St. Stephen's Cemetery in Saanich.

Psychology Death Study No Macabre Party Game

VANCOUVER (CP) — Guess the date and manner of your death.

Next, make out your death certificate.

After you've done that, write your obituary.

And finally, just for jollies, imagine death as a person and describe him.

This isn't a macabre party game. It's an assignment psychologist gave groups of university students, nurses, undertakers and Unitarians recently in Ontario.

The results were presented to the Canadian Psychological Association by Richard Lonetto, a psychology professor at the University of Guelph who said three common factors emerged from the groups.

First, they were aware of their own eventual deaths on and off throughout life rather than becoming suddenly aware of it during a crisis, but tended to play down the thought. He referred to it "as background music to my life which I do not wish to hear."

Second, "part of death anxiety fear is fear of hospitalization," involving fatal illnesses.

Third, "there's a denial factor, a belief science will save us . . . will win out over mortality."

Lonetto continued that analysis of the replies also showed unique differences among the groups:

The greatest concerns among students were they would die of a heart attack. They also were interested in life after death.

The nurses appeared more worried about viewing corpses and the possible dangers of working in a hospital.

The funeral service people, had "a great fear of appearing to be nervous in front of other people when discussions about death are going on."

"In view of their profession, that's not surprising," said Lonetto, "but — something that didn't show up with other groups — they are very concerned about what death meant to them as persons."

The greatest fear among the Unitarians was one of possible illness and pain, said Lonetto.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Father's Day favorites . . .

Next Sunday, June 19, is the day when dads of all ages come into their own . . . and no matter what else Dad may be presented with . . . we feel sure he'll be delighted to get something to munch on! . . . Purdy's have such lovely confections to pander to a man's sweet tooth . . . obtainable in quantities . . . and at prices . . . that even the youngest member of the family can afford out of a child allowance! . . . Take peanut brittle, for instance . . . This has stood the taste test of time over the years . . . and we've yet to meet a man who doesn't go for Purdy's extra crunchy peanut brittle in a big way! . . . Purdy's salted nuts are excellent too . . . They come in attractive gift boxes, as well as in the ordinary way . . . There's an assortment of creamy fudge, either plain or with nuts, in yummy flavors . . . Or maybe you'd like to give Dad some solid chocolate maple leaves (4.50 a pound, or just 91¢ for a cellophane package!) . . . Pure milk, or dark, chocolate medalions are new, and these, too, cost $4.50 per lb. . . . Hint for the small fry: Give Dad a chocolate totem pole . . . only $1.75 . . . More suggestions . . . Almond Bark with white chocolate . . . Filbert Slab with milk chocolate . . . and nuts coated with dark chocolate . . . Of course you can have boxes made up of all Dad's known favorites and they'll be attractively packed and decorated with a droll mustachioed face! . . . Purdy's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1241, Mayfair Shopping Centre, 385-5032, and Empress Hotel, 385-3555.

Watches from Cartier of Paris . . .

We've seen Cartier watches in days past . . . in the prestigious Cartier jewellery stores in New York and Paris . . . but never expected to find these very exclusive watches and clocks sold right here in Victoria . . . specifically, and solely, by de Goutiere, Jeweller! . . . Mr. de G. showed us some beauties this week . . . An 18k gold man's watch known as the "tank watch" because its inspiration is drawn from the smooth profile of a U.S. tank . . . Sapphire winding button and alligator strap whose gold buckle has the unique Cartier symbol . . . Priced at $1250 . . . Just the one on hand now, but Mr. de G. can get you one . . . or a similar lady's watch . . . in a matter of days. We also admired some small Cartier 8-day alarm clocks . . . all with the distinctive white dial and black Roman numerals, but in various-shaped enamel cases. One is blue, another coral . . . both these tagged at $235 . . . while a black and gold, or tortoiseshell oval clock is $275 . . . Sapphire buttons on these, too, and Cartier symbols on the easel part . . . An 18k gold lady's watch by Cyma has a lid which, when closed, looks just like a regular fine gold mesh bracelet . . . And there are extra thin gold Girard-Perregaux quartz watches for both men and ladies . . . guaranteed accurate within one minute per year . . . de Goutier, Jeweller, 2524 Estevan Ave., 592-3224.

Jumpsuits for a carefree summer . . .

Now we certainly wouldn't urge you to jump willy-nilly into a jump suit unless you've got the figure for it . . . which, in our book, means slender, and reasonably tall . . . But if you qualify in this way . . . nothing's more trim and stunning than an attractively-styled jump suit! . . . We saw a couple at Charmante's this week which qualify admirably . . . Both by Marjorie Hamilton . . . one's a navy polyester knit with multi-colored stripes around the camisole top, and edging the short sleeves of the matching jackets . . . The other is a pretty red and white jump suit with the new handkerchief sleeves on the jacket . . . For more casual wear there are jumpsuits with the denim look, made of 100% polyester . . . Rose, green or blue, they're zipped up the front, have shirred, elasticized belt and short sleeves . . . A beige suit in a poly blend has a drawstring waist tying in front . . . short sleeves . . . Do go have a look at these very attractive jumpsuits . . . and at the same time get them to show you their new LeRoy polyester knit jackets . . . Straight cut, with short slits at the sides . . . They're nice over slacks or summer frocks . . . great for golfers! $40 at . . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555.

Give Dad a comfy chair to relax in! . . .

You know what we think would make an absolutely super Father's Day gift? One of the comfy, cushy, good-looking recliner or swivel easy chairs we saw on Standard Furniture's mezzanine floor last Monday! . . . With one of these for his very own, Dad will be able to really relax after his day's labors . . . (and Mum will probably get just as much use out of it during the day when Dad's away!) . . . A particularly interesting chair is the "Wall Snuggler" recliner which fits right up against a wall in the smallest of rooms . . . yet through some magic we don't understand, reclines right out without moving it an inch! . . . A lot of these chairs now have fabric covers, with vinyl just on the parts which get the hardest wear . . . Standard has an amazing number of easy chairs to choose from . . . in a variety of sizes and shapes to fit every type of human form . . . Squishy, low, fat chairs for shorter people . . . tall wide ones for the larger man . . . Some chairs that rock as well as recline . . . or swivel for easy reading . . . You really should go in and try some of these chairs out for yourself . . . snuggle into them . . . Better still, lure Dad in with you and let him do the trying on for size . . . Like buying a pair of shoes, you know . . . an easy chair has to FIT right! . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

Now's the time to get your mohair coat! . . .

We hear from various sources that a lot of people have been asking for mohair coats . . . and we do know from our browsings around town that these are in rather short supply . . . So when Roy Imports got some in from England this week we thought we'd better tell you about them fast . . . before they're all snapped up by our tourist friends who are starting to arrive in town . . . These mohairs are really beautiful coats . . . made by Chris Reakie & Sons of Grasmere, in the English Lake Country . . . Two different styles . . . one a classic in solid Copenhagen Blue . . . the other with a wide collar which can be either left open, or buttoned across with the big front button . . . Cream or white in this . . . a lovely rosy red too, as we recall . . . But both these styles come in a delightful striped effect too . . . a change from the plaids of heretofore . . . All sorts of beautiful colors, which blend and intermingle without being loud . . . and of course the mohair itself is as light as thistledown . . . yet warm and luxurious-looking . . . Noticed a few mohair capes from Ireland (our favorite of which was promptly snapped up by our companion!) . . . All these mohairs are completely lined . . . Coats are practically a steal at $195! . . . So if you covet mohair, hurry in to . . . Roy Imports, 817 Government St., 384-4737, and 435 Simcoe St., 384-4932.

Been to Wilson's Oak Bay shop lately? . . .

If anyone should ask us to list the "must" places to see in Oak Bay . . . we'd almost certainly start with Wilson's store at Windsor Park and Newport Ave.! . . . This is such a thoroughly delightful store . . . a pleasure to the eye . . . and a showcase of all that is best in fashion and accessories! . . . After too long an absence, we dropped in ourself this week and were just as impressed as ever! . . . Just about everything you can get in the downtown store . . . plus some adorable summer cotton golf skirts with little panties underneath . . . some of them cut a bit longer than usual . . . and short-sleeved cotton tank tops in various colors to go with them . . . A good selection of pant suits by Bleyle, Jaeger and Sportscraft . . . A lot of gay and bright summer dresses . . . Fenno-Sport from Finland . . . the unusual cotton prints so many people like . . . Dresses by Lanvin, Albert Nipon, etc. . . . We especially like the Irish linen and cotton knits by Pallas of Ireland . . . Two-piece styles in natural with colored trim . . . Pantsuits in dark brown or tawny colors . . . Blouses, tops, scarves, summer purses . . . You name it, Wilson's have it! . . . A good selection of children's wear and adorable stuffed animals . . . And if you'd like to buy a handsome tie for your husband for Father's Day . . . Wilson's have plenty to choose from! . . . W & J. Wilson Limited, 1210 Newport Ave., 592-2821.

Terrific sale of all kinds of lighting . . .

Lighting Exclusive invariably draws us like a magnet the moment we set foot in the Hillside Mall . . . but this week we were positively mesmerized! Not only is the store in the process of being renovated (in a sneaky way so you're not aware of what's going on . . . only realize that suddenly there's more space and openness all around you) . . . but they've got a simply gigantic pre-inventory sale under way! . . . 10% to 50% off just about everything in sight . . . including new merchandise like the 24k gold-plated and hand-polished crystal chandeliers from Austria . . . These you must see . . . one round one looks like a satellite . . . Another with candle-shaped lights . . . excitingly glittering with crystal and gold . . . has such spare lines it will enhance either a contemporary or traditional room to perfection . . . We saw hundreds of beautiful swags, chandeliers, table and floor lamps, wall fixtures . . . in fact just about every type of light giver you can think of . . . So if you'd like to add decorator drama to your home via lighting . . . now is the time to do it at a healthy saving! . . . You'll be enchanted with all the beautiful, interesting, functional and "different" lamps and lighting fixtures surrounding you on all sides when you visit. . . . Beston's Lighting Exclusive, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-0332.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP.

Mrs. D.M. writes: My African violets are very dusty. Can I wash my plants without harming them?

We say: You can "dust" the leaves of your African violets with a toothbrush. Spray the air above the plants with warm water, allow a fine mist to settle on the leaves and then very gently brush. Use a brand new toothbrush, one especially for the plants, or sterilize an old one and keep it with your plant supplies. It will come in handy!

We thank J.L. of Seattle, who writes: Anyone who has hunted a Hindu rope plant for a year deserves a little help. Hindu rope plants both variegated and green, are available from Loyce's Flowers, Rts. 2, Granbury, Texas. Send two quarters for catalogue.

To Mrs. R.T. about the procedure for bringing geraniums indoors during the cold weather.

We say: First wash the plants with hot soapy water to remove any possible infestation of insects. Then place the plants in the brightest, sunniest window. Pick off all dead blossoms. In fact, cutting the plant back will help produce blossoms when you put the plants outdoors in the spring. Some recommend plancing the plants in a dark basement, after cutting them back, and leaving them unwatered until spring. Gradually move them into the full sun, begin watering and feeding and lovely blooms should appear. Remember, little water is needed indoors during the rest period, and no food.

Knit Spread Clean with Soap

By MAY E. MAC LEAN

I am often asked how one goes about laundering a knitted or crocheted bedspread, or should one have them dry cleaned. I don't recommend dry cleaning. It's all right once or twice, but constant dry cleaning tends to turn white a yellowish tinge. Good old mild soap and water is the best.

I find the bathtub is the best container for such a job as this, and it's quite a chore which cannot be done in a hurry, so set aside the whole morning or afternoon. If you have them, the big bath towels are a great help, failing that you can make do with the smaller ones, or use beach towels.

If your bedspread is quite soiled or discolored either from storage or wear, it might be a good idea to soak it overnight in one of those new ensyme pre-wash powders. I've found them very good. They usually call for cold water.

After the soak, wash a couple of times in warm soapy water and mild soap flakes. You will find it relatively easy to squeeze the water through the bedspread when it's in the bathtub, then rinse in the same way two or three times. It is important to be sure that all the soap has been rinsed away. Knead as much of the water as you can out of the bedspread while it is in the bathtub. You could even leave it draining for say an hour, so that as much water as possible can be removed.

Now here is where the bath towels come into the picture. First wrap the bedspread into a bath towel, and keep changing towels as they absorb the moisture. When the spread becomes lighter and more manageable, place towels between the folds and the water will gradually be absorbed into the towels.

On no account hang the bedspread or allow the weight of it while wet to pull it out of shape, as there is a heavy weight to an article such as this when saturated with water and untold damage can be done to the delicate threads. Allow as much time as possible for it to dry, and when it is just the tiniest bit damp, give it a light press.

As a spread is so large and awkward to handle and, an ironing board so small, I use the bed itself. With just a sheet on the mattress, and the wrong side of the spread uppermost, I lightly press with a warm iron. If the crochet or knitting is of a delicate design (by that I mean lacey) I use another sheet on top, so as to prevent the tip of the iron catching in the openwork of the design.

As I have said, it is quite a chore, but well worth the time, effort and trouble. You will of course have to fold the bedspread if you are storing it, but do remember to bring it out every month or so and reverse the folds, otherwise the threads can deteriorate or become damaged.

NO. 2024 the Daisy Afghan in crochet is now available again, if you wish to re-order.

This week's pattern No. 1276 is a handy little bag to carry your little bits and pieces, your sewing or knitting, or even to use as a handbag. There are instructions for two such bags on the one leaflet, one knit, the other crochet. Both simple and quick to do and finished with the wooden handle frames that can be purchased in the dime store.

To order Leaflet No. 1276 or any other leaflet mentioned, send 75 cents for each, plus a stamped self-addressed return envelope. Send to: May E. Mac Lean, KNIT and CHAT, c/o Box B, 486 Montford Drive, Dollard des Ormeaux, P.Q., H9G 1M6.

Please be sure to state pattern number when ordering and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. Allow about two weeks for normal delivery. All patterns are now 75 cents, and all back numbers are available.

your health

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D.

We've all been brought up on catch phrases of medical truths and medical fiction. Many fads and superstitions have been handed down for centuries. Some of these have amazing scientific virtues. Many drugs used in aboriginal tribes have been subsequently found to have medical validity.

Digitalis used for heart disease, rauwolfia for high blood pressure and heparin, a blood-thinner taken from leeches, were found to be effective even though the scientific reason was not explained for many years.

Do some readers still believe that if you swallow a fruit pit you will develop appendicitis? Not true. Does "a lean horse win a long race"? True. Obesity is an enemy of longevity. Is the birth mark on a newborn baby's face caused by the mother's fright during pregnancy? No, this is an inherited myth. Is gout a rich man's disease? Not true. Gout has no special respect for social economic status.

"My joints ache. I know it's going to rain tomorrow." There may not be scientific proof of this, but many people can anticipate bad weather by changes in the aches and pains in their joints.

Does eating sweets cause diabetes? No. Diabetes is a disorder of the hormone, insulin, manufactured in the pancreas. The control of sweets is of importance after diabetes has been diagnosed and a dietary regime is established.

"My blood is thin. I need a good tonic." "Tired, thin, worn blood" is not a medical diagnosis. The presence of anemia can be established only by careful blood studies. Once the type of anemia is established, specialized treatment is started by the doctor.

Is beefsteak good treatment for a black eye? True, but wet compresses do the very same thing and they're lots cheaper.

"Anything greasy is best for first-aid treatment for burns." False. The best first-aid treatment for ordinary household burns is the immediate application of cold water. Covering a severe burn with grease makes it difficult if a doctor must get to the burn later for treatment.

"It's important to have a bowel movement every day." False. There are normal variations in time for all people. Some do not move their bowels more than once in three days. This is still normal. Far too many people become compulsive about daily bowel movements. This leads them to resort to harsh laxatives and enemas. Six to eight glasses of water daily (with the doctor's permission) can be an ideal laxative.

Pooch Will Go Bonkers in Cage

Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: An article I just read suggests you can leave a difficult dog like mine in a crate during the day while you're at work. The one I've ordered is plenty big enough for Jinx to stand up in, turn around, and lie down in comfortably. It's light and airy and, being metal, is easy to clean and strong. For a dog like Jinx that tends to chew up things in the apartment when she's by herself, keeping her in a crate during the day is a great way to go, and I thought you'd like to pass this helpful advice along to your readers. I don't know why I hadn't thought of this answer to my Jinxy problems before.—M.A.

DEAR M.A.: Crates for canines can be advantageous under many circumstances. When shipping a dog, they're an obvious necessity. In car, trailer, or boat they may, under some circumstances, be an excellent way to keep the canine secure and safe. Around home there are occasions when keeping the dog crated for a short period would be by far the simplest way to handle a situation. The key to success in the above situations is to have a properly constructed, adequately-sized crate to begin with, and then (and this is vital) train the dog to accept, and, if possible, even appreciate, this airy little cave as its own temporary quarters. However, conning your canine into accepting a cage can be carried only so far. A dog which is bored and consequently destructive because it's left alone for long periods in an apartment, is going to be bored and "bonkers", too, in a lot shorter time cooped up in a crate.

Long term caging is for the birds (and some small, furry friends). Canines can't cope with it physically or psychologically.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Our beautiful 16-month-old cat, Pandora, has the most miserable disposition of any cat I've ever met. She's been with us since she was eight weeks old and never been mistreated. She never goes outside. She growls at the drop of a hat, and hates our 17-year-old son so much she growls menancingly at him the moment he enters the room. Only when she's in heat is he allowed to touch her. Pandora is now expecting her first litter. The stud is calm and loving. What are the chances that her kittens will inherit her crummy disposition—T.R.

DEAR T.R.: The chances are better than 50-50 her kittens will be similarly non-loving, particularly since they'll be raised with her and thus learn to share her attitudes. From this standpoint, weaning the kittens early and moving them into a more favorable environment would increase their dependence, acceptance, and possibly even appreciation of humans they're living with.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I understand this maw, these little blue seeds in the bird-seed we're using, is actually opium! Just out of idle curiosity, how strong would these seeds be—J.S.

DEAR J.S.: If you're worried about turning your bird into a feathered hophead, forget it. Those blue poppy seeds (Papaver somniferum var. nigrum) are not strong seeds, not as far as opium is concerned, anyway. They don't contain any.

More than 2,500,000 Canadians of all ages suffer from some type of cardiovascular disease, an ailment of the heart and blood vessels, and more than half of all deaths are the result of heart and circulatory diseases.

However, according to the 16-page booklet Your Heart much progress has been made in the research, diagnosis, treatment and control of heart diseases. For instance, at present most people who suffer a heart attack recover; high blood pressure can be controlled and most heart defects can be repaired.

The booklet explains several wide spread cardiovascular diseases such as atherosclerosis, high blood pressure, heart attacks, strokes and rheumatic heart trouble. It discusses how a doctor can check your blood pressure and the working of your heart. It also states that most people with a heart disease can and do work. However, your doctor is the best judge to tell you how much you should do.

For the booklet please contact your provincial Heart Association. The address is in your telephone book. With your request enclose return postage and an addressed label.

Dates No Problem . . . But Marriage Is

DEAR ABBY: I am a 24-year-old woman who has had enough bad experiences with men to fill a book. I've always had a good figure and a pretty face, and I never had any trouble getting dates. The trouble is I want to get married, but none of the guys I've gone with has wanted to marry me. They all want affairs, but not marriage.

I have had two abortions and have promised myself that I will not go to bed with another man unless he marries me first.

Sex never gave me much pleasure. I just gave in to please the guy.

I'm going with a man now who keeps trying to get me into bed, but I'm holding out. He promised that if he gets me pregnant he will marry me.

Now I'm wondering if maybe that isn't the way to get him to marry me. I'd really like to marry him.

I'm so mixed up I don't know what to do. Can you help me — Wants Marriage

DEAR WANTS: With regard to the man in your life: His promise to marry you if he gets you pregnant in about as worthless as he is.

Stick to your decision. You're beginning to get it together. Don't permit yourself to be used.

DEAR ABBY: My husband has been having an affair right in front of my face for more than two years. His "mistress" is a bit out of the ordinary. It's a set of golf clubs.

I married a golf nut. When he's not working or eating, he has an imaginary golf club in his hands, which he continually swings back and forth. His practice area ranges from my parents' home to our bedroom.

He has left the house in a rainstorm to go to the driving range to practice!

Other than his all-consuming obsession with golf, he is probably the most perfect husband a woman could imagine. — Jealous

DEAR JEALOUS: I wonder if you know how lucky you are. If you aren't already a golfer, I urge you to develop an interest in the sport. Take lessons from a pro, keep your head down and keep your eye on your husband.

DEAR ABBY: Did you know that some people actually can hardly wait to get the newspaper to read the divorce column.

I think I will gag if I hear once more, "Oh, did you see in the newspaper that so and so is divorcing her husband"

A piece of news like that seems to make some busybody's day.

Abby, is there any good reason for publishing the names of those who have received divorce decrees? Personally, I think it's an invasion of one's privacy. — Gagging

DEAR GAGGING: Laws require the registration of births, deaths, divorces and marriages. This is for both the public's information and protection. In areas where this "public record" is not too extensive, newspapers publish it as a service to their readers. A public record, mandated by law, can hardly be considered an "invasion of privacy." But if you think it is, why not challenge the law?

Pregnancy Symptoms Beat Cancer

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists are looking into the possibility of tricking a woman's body into thinking she's pregnant in an effort to reduce the risk of breast cancer, says a Nobel Prize winning scientist.

Sir Peter Medawar, now at the Clinical Research Centre at Harrow, England, said studies have shown that a determining factor in the risk of breast cancer is the age of the woman at the birth of her first child.

If, for example, a woman has her first child under 18 years of age, he said, her risk is only a third the risk of a woman who has her first child at 35 or over.

"A late first pregnancy is associated with an increased risk of breast cancer," said Medawar, speaking at the dedication of a cancer research building at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Centre.

Medaware said the link was established by epidemiological studies conducted by Dr. Brian McMahon and associates at the Harvard School of Public Health and could eventually prove as important as the finding of a link between cigarette smoking and lung cancer.

The studies have been confirmed by laboratory experiments on animals. But the explanation of the protective effect is unknown, Medawar said.

Esquimalt Rigged Out For Buccaneer Days

Ho, Ho, Ho and a bottle of rum — Esquimalt Buccaneer Days are about to come!

This is the annual event when many of the municipality's residents turn into temporary Capt. Hooks and swashbuckling pirates.

This year's festivities start on Friday, June 17, the action being centred in the Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Things get under way at 7 p.m. with the crowning of this year's queen by retiring queen, Barbara Rainsford. There will be displays by the Maple Leaf Drum and Drill Corps, Ukranian dancers and the Victoria Sports School, featuring Phillip Delesalle.

The Rainbow Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps will stage the Ceremony of the Flags. From 8:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. the Bowser Moon group will play for a teen dance. At Bullen Park a midway will be open for business at 7 p.m.

On the Saturday, the Esquimalt Lions will serve a pancake breakfast in Bullen Park from 7 a.m. to noon. A decorated bicycle contest will be held 9 a.m. on Dominion Road and the Buccaneer Day Parade will start 10:30 a.m. on Esquimalt Road. The midway opens at 10 a.m.

At noon the official opening of the bikeway will take place on Admirals and Lyall, there will be a softball tournament in Bullen Park and a drillerama at the sports centre.

A beer garden will be open for business in Bullen Park from 12:30 to 5 p.m. From 1 to 5 p.m. there will be an arts and crafts display in the Pioneer Room.

At 1:30 p.m. the Esquimalt senior secondary school's band will play in the Esquimalt Plaza. Overhead, sky divers will do their thing in the vicinity of Bullen Park at 1:45, 2 and 2:15 p.m.

A swimming display will be held 2 to 5 p.m. in the recreation centre, and a garden club flower show, as well as St. Paul's church tea, will take place in the Jubilee Hall.

At Bullen Park a pizza pieman contest will start at 2 p.m., an egg-throwing contest at 3 p.m., a baby bottle contest at 3:30 p.m. and a woman's nail-driving contest 15 minutes later.

A senior citizens' dance will be staged 7:30 p.m. at the Jubilee Hall while at the curling rink there will be a pirates' den casino from 7:30 to 11:30 p.m. and a dance from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Activity moves to the Kinsmen Gorge Park on the Sunday, beginning with a fishing derby for children, 11 years or under. The food concessions will be open at 11 a.m. There will be children's races at 11:30 a.m. and an outdoor ecumenical service at 12:30 p.m.

At 1 p.m. there will be a treasure hunt; at 1:30 p.m. a tug-of-war, at 2 p.m. a ball throw, at 3 p.m. a log roll.

The fishing derby will end at 4 p.m., prizes being presented by the Buccaneer Queen.

WATERGATE: A WORD SPELLING MONEY

WASHINGTON (AP) — A lot of people made money on Watergate. Bad guys, good guys, little guys, chiefs.

They all learned, as Richard Nixon told John Dean in another context, that cash "could be gotten."

Nixon, of course, got it from television. Others got it by being lawyers, lawyer-authors, principals-turned-writers, reporters-turned-authors, movie makers, and even sellers of bourbon with the magic word Watergate on the label.

In the five years since the break-in on June 17, 1972, Watergate has become a growth industry.

Estimating the size of the take is as productive as trying to pry the identity of Deep Throat from Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein. It is estimated at tens of millions of dollars.

Lawyers, who get up to $250 an hour, did a land office business with 68 individuals and 20 corporations charged with crimes.

The Government Printing Office had volume upon volume of Watergate testimony, exhibits and discussions to sell.

A record company went to the Supreme Court, hoping to be allowed to sell copies of the White House tapes.

The 1976 edition of Books in Print has 53 entries under the heading of Watergate. The list is not complete because, for example, the biggest hardcover seller of them all — Woodward and Bernstein's The Final Days—is listed in a different category.

Both book and authors earned the Nixon judgment of "trash," but Simon and Schuster sold 630,000 copies in hardcover. Sales figures for the paperback version are not complete. All the President's Men, sold 280,000 copies in hardcover and 4.62 million in paperback.

At royalty rates that run to 15 per cent in the best-seller category, plus movie rights, both reporters became millionaires as well as models for young people jamming journalism schools.

"The fastest-selling book I have seen in 14 years was the White House Transcripts," says Michael Fox, education director of the American Booksellers Association. The Bantam issue of the White House transcripts sold 1.9 million copies. Dell's version sold 1.7 million.

Blind Ambition, John Dean's confessional written after he served his prison term, sold 223,600 copies at last listing. Leon Jaworski, giving the prosecutor's side, hit the best-seller lists with 205,000 copies of The Right and the Power. CBS reporter Dan Rather, writing about Nixon's Palace Guard, racked up a paperback sale of one million.

The Nixon side, due next year, will bring him an estimated $2 million.

All, of course, is not going into bankbooks. The legal costs of Watergate are wondrous to contemplate when the disbarments, ruined careers, months and years spent in prison are subtracted.

Nixon's efforts to get custody of his papers and tapes have run up a bill of more than $600,000 with his lawyers. The costs of fighting what his aides call "harassment suits" have brought the total to nearly $1 million.

Warhead Opposed

WASHINGTON (WP) — Sen. Mark Hatfield (R-Ore.) offered an amendment to strike funds for productions of the new neutron killer warhead that are contained in the Energy Research and Development Administration portion of the public works appropriations bill.

Hatfield said he did not expect to win in the Senate.

"I'm making a record to take for a vote on the Senate floor," he said.

The new "enhanced radiation" warhead would be the first nuclear battlefield weapon specifically designed to kill people rather than destroy military installations.

RCMP Gets Heads

OTTAWA (CP) — Saskatoon-born David Bejersdorfer, 46, will become RCMP deputy commissioner for administration Sept.1, Solicitor-General Francis Fox announced Friday. Beiersdorfer, director of RCMP organization and personnel, will replace R. H. Simmonds who becomes commissioner Sept. 1.

DRAMATIC TEST of a prototype nuclear fuel cask was arranged by the U.S. Energy Research and Development Administration in New Mexico to see how well the cask would stand up to impact. Sequence begins at top as rocket-powered locomotive fires up and plunges down the track toward the cask, mounted on a truck trailer. Second and third photos are a split second before and a split second after impact. Photo four was taken at peak of impact while five is condition of locomotive and trailer after the dust cleared. Although the front quarter of the locomotive was staved in by the impact, the cask withstood the impact at 81.5 m.p.h. The cask, which did not leak any of its (non-nuclear) contents, has also been smashed into a concrete wall at 61 m.p.h. and into a trailer truck at 84 m.p.h. without leaking.

Jordan Tripling Irrigation

AMMAN (Reuter) — Jordan plans to triple the amount of irrigated farmland in the Jordan valley over the next five years.

One aim is to help compensate the kingdom for the loss of a quarter of its cereal growing area and four-fifths of its fruit orchards in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war. Another aim is to attract people back to the land from the towns of Amman, Irbid and Zarga.

The plans fall short of the old Yarhouk River scheme, which was dashed by the 1967 war when Israel occupied the west bank of the Jordan River and the Syrian Golan Heights.

The main part of the scheme is to build a dam farther up the Yarmouk River, away from the Golan Heights and Israeli lines.

In 1967 work already had begun on the Mukhziba Dam, which was part of a project to irrigate 200,000 acres on both banks of the Jordan.

But when the Israelis captured the heights on the Syrian side of the frontier river in 1967, construction on the dam stopped.

Now Jordan wants to build the upper dam at Magarin.

When it is completed the planners are optimistic that 89,000 acres of rich Jordan Valley earth will be irrigated by 1982, more than three times the present area.

The Magarin project still is in its infancy, and experts say they have not finished the $1-million feasibility study on it, which is being financed by the United States.

To build the dam Jordan must agree with Syria on how to share the seven-million cubic feet of water stored behind the dam and the electric power it produces.

Only when the lower dam is built will Jordan be able to obtain full benefit from the Yarmouk scheme, because much of the water used to generate power at Magarin cannot be trapped again for irrigation until there is a second dam.

When well watered, the land of the Jordan Valley can support up to four crops a year.

If the feasibility study on the Magarin Dam proves positive, the U.S. aid program is prepared to contribute $5 million for its design.

Rubber Head

TORONTO (CP) — Alan Broadbent has been appointed president of the Rubber Association of Canada, succeeding Kenneth Graydon who has taken an executive position with the Federation of Automobile Dealers Associations of Canada.

Used Greeting Cards Show That She Cares

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Kitchener's Sacred Heart Catholic Women's League sends out thousands of pounds of clothing and literature to Roman Catholic missions in places as separated as Western Canada and Africa.

Every year such mailings become more expensive. In 1966 it cost $8.50 in postage to send a 22-pound box of clothing to Africa; last year it cost $18.50.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Resch and their baskets are the CWL's weapons against these soaring costs.

They make what they call their "mission" security baskets. Used greeting cards are the raw materials for the baskets.

"I had seen a similar basket a few years before—so I thought, why not try it."

Resch pitched in to help and the inventive couple came up with two styles and three sizes.

"I didn't know then we'd be making 2,000," said Mrs. Resch." And we won't quit as long as they sell to help the postage."

Six double cards form the basket, with one card forming the base. They are reinforced with cardboard, making it difficult to punch.

Resch punches the cards and Mrs. Resch assembles and laces then together with colorful wool stitching.

"We've always worked together," said Resch. "It's important for a couple to help each other. It's the story of our life".

The Resch household has been changed by the mission project. The recreation room is more or less a storage room and often "the living room floor is wall-to-wall cards.

Each basket is custom-made. Mrs. Resch carefully chooses complementing cards. They include flowers, kittens, puppies, babies, scenery, antique cars and Waterloo County scenes.

They have grown so popular that people buy them as gifts for hospital patients and shut-ins. Filled with fruit, a plant, homemade candy or cookies, they add a touch of color. Empty, they hold patients greeting cards, hair rollers or balls of knitting wool.

One woman had some of her 50th wedding anniversary cards made into baskets "as a memento for my children." New mothers also have congratulatory cards fashioned into a basket.

"We also have customers order baskets to complement decor of kitchen or bedroom," said Mrs. Resch.

When Mrs. Resch started making the baskets she little thought they'd aid a mission project near to her heart.

Eight years ago the couple's only daughter went to teach at the Sandy Lake Indian Reserve, 250 miles northwest of Sioux lookout.

Linda found food prices high and her parents began sending her food parcels. Linda shared her treats with her Indian pupils. Soon they became more than just pupils; they and their families became friends.

"The Indians are a proud people, they never asked, but we knew there was a need for warm clothing for adults, teens and infants," said Mrs. Resch.

Power Imports Rise

the prairies

WINNIPEG (CP) — Although low water levels have forced shutdowns and cutbacks in Manitoba hydro generating station operations, the utility still exports some power.

A spokesman said Thursday hydro exports power to the U.S. in the late afternoon peak hours, although it relies heavily on American power imports during the night.

The Manitoba utility purchased $1 million worth of inexpensive night-time power from the U.S. in April In April of 1976, with normal water levels, it purchased no American power.

Normal exports of expensive peak-hour electricity to the U.S. are down by about half, with the April figure set at about $770,000.

Generating plants in Manitoba are bing shut down or cut back at night, allowing water to collect in reservoirs overnight for use during the day-time peak demand period.

As well, the province is relying more than usual on its coal-burning thermal electric plants.

Despite the low water levels, hydro spokesmen indicate there is no danger of power shortages, and Premier Ed Schreyer has said the increased costs will not result in higher hydro rates.

Growth Rate Down

EDMONTON (CP) — Although the Alberta capital has 9,915 more residents than it did a year ago, the growth rate declined slightly in the last year.

The 1977 civic census shows that 471,474 people live in the city.

The current growth rate is 2.15 per cent., a slight decline from the 2.19 per cent recorded in last year's civic census.

Beds Closed

MELVILLE, Sask. (CP) — St. Peter's Hospital here has closed 20 of its 81 beds in order to keep within its 1977 operating budget, Ken Kellington, the hospital's business manager said Thursday.

The beds in the level 6, acute care, facility, will be closed for the rest of the year.

Edmonton Crime Up

EDMONTON (CP) — A total of 203 armed robberies were reported here between Jan. 1 and June 6, an increase of almost 100 per cent over the same period last year.

"But I would like to think we have reached the peak in the incidence of armed robberies this year," W. H. Stewart, criminal division investigation superintendent, said.

Police are optimistic because they have arrested at least 20 people in the past three weeks for allegedly committing armed robbery.

Hunting Fees Up

WINNIPEG (CP) — A provincial cabinet order Thursday increased licence fees for deer hunters, with the additional funds to be used to restore deer habitats in the province.

Licences for Manitobans will increase to $8.50 from $7, for hunters from other provinces to $48 from $40 and for non-Canadians to $60 from $50.

Post Sought

EDMONTON (CP) — Joe Dion, chief of the Kehewin Cree tribe in northeastern Alberta, will seek nomination for the July elections for the Indian Association of Alberta (IAA) presidency.

The position became vacant in April when Harold Cardinal resigned to become director-general of Indian affairs in Alberta.

Affiliation Set

WINNIPEG (CP) — The University of Manitoba senate has approved in principle an affiliation between the university and St. Andrews College, an on-campus institution teaching Ukrainian culture and studies courses.

Details of the affiliation are to be decided within the next nine months.

SECOND NEWSPAPER?

EDMONTON (CP) — A feasibility study to find if the city could support a second daily newspaper is being carried out by representatives from the Toronto Sun and the Financial Post, a Maclean-Hunter publication. Carl O-Byrne, the Sun's circulation director, said a new newspaper, possibly a tabloid, would have to cater to an audience other than that of the Edmonton Journal's.

It would be a joint venture and details have not been worked out.

Teaching, Farming Jobs Turn Scarce?

EDMONTON (CP) — Young teachers and farmers will have difficulty finding jobs in future, predicts a just published forecast manual by Alberta's education and manpower department.

But graduates going into medicine and health, management and administration, arts and recreation and social science occupations will find opportunities good.

The forecast states the highest growth rates will be in these fields. Farming, religion and teaching will have the lowest growth rates.

Other predictions are that between 1975 and 1982, 234,000 new workers will be needed to meet business growth demands and another 173,000 workers will be needed to replace employees who retire or die.

The forecast, covering 500 occupations, predicts most groups are expected to grow in a fairly stable manner, with the major exception being the construcion trades which are forecast to grow rapidly until 1978 and then slowly thereafter.

NINE-FOOT BEDSHEETS LAW OUT

SALEM, Ore. (UPI) — Hotel and motel owners in Oregon no longer face fines for failure to provide their guests with bedsheets nine feet long.

The state Senate Friday repealed a 1909 law requiring 108-inch sheets in all lodging houses and setting a $50 per day fine for violators.

Sen. Mary Roberts said the law, which now awaits the governor's signature, hasn't been enforced.

No reason was given for the original passage other than a mention that the sponsor was in the laundry business.

One million annual visitors prove Maui is still 'da best'

ON THE GO
With Jerry Hulse

WAILEA, Maui — Old hands have been saying all along that Maui is "da best." Well, nobody's arguing the point. Not any more. Not after Maui logged more than one million visitors in a single year. This was the tally for '76. Now everybody's betting '77 will outdo even that figure.

With so much action, everyone's making sugar. It's not the stuff, though, that they haul from the cane fields. It's green, you bet. But it's spelled M-O-N-E-Y.

Creating a huge splash is Alexander and Baldwin (one of Hawaii's Big Five), which holds title to 73,000 acres of prime land on the island, including the state's biggest sugar plantation. Together with Northwest Mutual Life Insurance Co., A and B is developing a $100 million spread on the skirts of Haleakala, the volcano that hasn't popped off for a couple of centuries.

Happily for A and B's guests, it's dormant.

So instead of being paved with lava, the 1,500-acre Wailea project is a shocking green, a goodly share of it covering a rolling championship 18-hole golf course next to another 18 holes that's being bulldozed into position.

A and B's project on the southwest shore of Maui should not be confused with the Wailea on the northeast coast of the island of Hawaii.

Centerpiece of A and B's development is Pan Am's 558-room Inter-Continental Hotel which faces the islands of Kahoolane, tiny Molokini and Lanai.

Rooms in the Inter-Continental are scattered throughout a series of 15 low-rise wings and a seven-story midrise. Likened by some critics to Laurance Rockefeller's magnificent Mauna Kea Beach Hotel on the Big Island, the Inter-Continental takes in 17 acres, a property so huge the management passes out maps to keep guest from getting themselves lost.

Behind the hotel, Haleakala rises 10,000 feet into the heavens, the strait ahead here is the lure of the Pacific.

Besides the ocean, guests dip into two swimming pools presided over by two of Hawaii's sexiest lifeguards, 28-year-old Robin Sigel, who hails from Marina Del Rey, Calif., and Dana Anderson, 22, a Texan. Two luscious blondes. So there you are — women's lib has surfaced in the Pacific.

Due to open early next year is a second hotel, the 357-room Wailea Beach. Similarly low-rise, it will be operated by Western International, a member of the United Airlines family. In the works — in addition to the hotel — are a couple of man-made waterfalls, swimming pools, a spa, shopping arcades, a game room and indoor-outdoor restaurants.

Both UAL and Pan Am aim to fill their nests with guests flown over by their own giant birds.

Where sugar cane once grew, condominiums also are on the rise. So far 354 are under construction or completed, and they're not cheap. You'll pay anywhere from $60,000 for a studio apartment to $230,000 for a three-bedroom pad with two and a half baths.

By October, a second condominium village will be taking shape. A and B has its sights on a residential community that will consist eventually of 3,600 homes and condominiums.

Meanwhile, studio units rent for $40 a night and two-bedroom townhouses are being booked for $100, the latter accommodating up to three couples. Vacationers staying a week or longer get 10 per cent written off the bill between now and Dec. 15, when prices will be hiked anywhere from $10 to $25 a day.

Activities at Wailea range from flight-seeing by helicopter to golf and tennis. The resort's 11 courts cost a tidy $1.1 million and feature a stadium seating 1,500. When the action's over, guests retire to the Set Point, a restaurant serving Mauiburgers and Mai Tais.

Huancavelica a silver paradise

Beautiful, but remote

By RICHARD GOTT

HUANCAVELICA, Peru — "Rare is the traveller of today who passes through Huancavelica," wrote Harry Franck in 1917 in his classic Vagabonding Down the Andes. Sixty years later the town is still somewhat off the beaten track.

Yet it is on all the early maps because here the Spaniards had quicksilver mines, and today, from the nearby silver mines of Julicani and Huachocolpa, comes much of Peru's silver production — from mines still in private ownership.

Here too, in the civil war between the Inca capitals of Quito and Cusco that preceded the arrival in the Sierra of Francisco Pizarro in the 16th century, Atahualfa defeated Huascar, paving the way not to the unification of the Inca empire, but to its defeat at the hands of the Spaniards.

Little now remains of the pre-Spanish origins of Huancavelica, but a stone Inca road still winds across the mountains into the town, under the electricity pylons, and a stream of warm water still pours out of the rock — providing baths for the children and water for washing clothes as it must have done for thousands of years.

Now it is just another beautiful Spanish colonial town, with tiled roofs and balconies, nestling in a sheltered spot beside a river, surrounded by high mountains. From early morning there is a steady stream of horsemen and Indian women coming in to market, a permanent daily ritual.

Sometime there are stalls with rough awnings overhead, more often those with things to sell sit on the roadside surrounded by their goods, large round ladies surrounded by large round cauldrons. There is a "magic" stall, with herbs and medicines and the dried carcases of the Andrean Condor eagle, and a dye stall with bright colors in tins.

But most of the market is devoted to fruit and vegetables, taking little note of climate or season: carrots and pumpkins, tomatoes and lettuce, cabbage, melons, bananas, cactus fruit, onions, leeks, apples, plums, grapes, raisins, oranges, potatoes, cucumber, maize, celery, spinach, beans, papayas, lemons, limes, peppers, pomegranates and parsley.

We came here from Huancayo on the bus, a six-hour journey following for some of the way the curse of the river Mantaro, one of the tributaries of the Amazon. By bus is the best way to travel in the Andes. Innumerable small companies operate services between the main towns, and, whatever the weather, they usually get through.

The traveller is rarely stranded for long, but the buses are always full to overloading and you are lucky to get a seat.

After a couple of hours travelling through rich and populated farmland, we stopped at the village of Izcuchaca where the road crosses the river. Now there is a modern metal bridge, but the old arched Spanish stone bridge that Franck crossed with his donkey still stands.

Village girls with baskets came out to the bus, selling maize and cheese — a delicious combination popular in this part of the Andes — and pastries filled with chicken. We rumbled into Huancavelica long after nightfall and found a warm hotel.

Legalized gambling boon to Spain

Fabled Costa del Sol to get tourist boost

By JAMES M. MARKHAM

MARBELLA, Spain — After a half century of banishment, gambling has been legalized in Spain. When the roulette wheels start turning and the dice begin to tumble, one of the main beneficiaries could be the fabled Costa del Sol, which is just recovering from a five-year tourist slump.

Garish and tacky to the east, classy and snobbish to the west, the meandering Costa del Sol is today littered with the skeletal hulks of unfinished high-rise hotel and apartment complexes — victims of a speculative boom that went bust.

But hoteliers say they expect this summer to be the best in several years, and the government's decision to legalize gambling is said to have reawakened investor interest as well.

"Since the announcement has been made, land values have gone up, and the Arabs are making their reservations," said Prince Alfonso de Hochenlohe, owner of the elegant Marbella Club, a hangout for Arab royalty, movie stars and other jet-set personalities.

The 52-year-old prince, who taught King Juan Carlos how to shoot skeet and is a sometime skiing companion of the Spanish monarch, began pushing for the legalization of gambling two years before Franco died on Nov. 20, 1975.

Gambling was banned in 1924 by the dictator Miguel Primo de Rivera, who was said to have been influenced by the Roman Catholic Church hierarchy in the matter. The puritanical Franco maintained the ban, it is said, because his father had wasted not a few of the family's pesetas at the gaming tables.

In February, the government of Prime Minister Adolfo Suarez formally legalized gambling, hoping thereby to give a boost to tourist earnings, Spain's single largest source of foreign cash. Last year, according to official figures, 30,014,087 foreign visitors spent $3.1 billion.

Prince Alfonso de Hochenlohe, an advocate of legalized gambling, at a marina near Marbella.

The potentially lucrative Spanish gambling market has triggered a scramble for gambling licences. Up and down the coast, which was developed by the wildest brand of free enterprise, American and European entrepreneurs are seeking Spanish partners.

Inevitably, there are rumors that American, Italian and Corsican gangsters are trying to elbow in, which makes the Suarez government leery.

"Where is blood, there are sharks," said Count Rudi Schoenburg, who is Prince Alfonso's aide-de-camp at the Marbella Club.

One apparent victim of the government's wariness is an American named Nathan Jacobson, builder of Caesar's Palace, who set up a company in Malaga called Sonesol and tried to sell the idea of a $60 million "super-complex like you see on the Las Vegas strip."

"In plain words, I'm disappointed," said Jacobson, who has been lobbying for more than a year from his base in a Torremolinos hotel. "If you talk about gambling and America — in Europe that means the mob."

Jacobson has talked about the mob before — in 1966 he denied before the Nevada Gaming Commission that the underworld had interests in Caesar's Palace — but he insists that he is as clean as a hound's tooth.

Jacobson argues that the government's apparent intention to endow Spain with both large and small casinos will dilute the market "and won't get the affluent tourists."

He also says that the government's insistence that casinos turn back 50 per cent of their profits "is going to make every Spanish casino operator a crook."

"No business in the world can operate with a tax of 50 per cent on its gross," he says.

There are Spaniards who agree that the planned 50 per cent tax will force casino operators to keep two sets of books — one for the treasury inspectors and one for conducting business. This is already a well-established practice among large Spanish companies.

The newly-created National Gambling Commission has not yet hinted who will get the coveted licenses, but a projected limitation of 25 per cent foreign participation in casino capital suggests that big Spanish money will control them.

Down here on the Costa del Sol that usually means money tied to the ultra-right financial establishment, which profited hugely by its political ties to the Franco regime.

One leading contender for a casino is said to be Jose Banus, a land developer who is close to the Franco family. The site would be the Puerto Banus, the glittering, white-washed Marbella port, where yachts from scattered corners of Europe bob at anchor.

Another major casino may be in Toremolinos, on the low-cost, package-tour stretch of the coast. Still others will be awarded to such traditional tourist havens as the Canary Islands San Sebastian, the Balearic Islands, the Catalan coast and Madrid.

Did you know that we have been in business serving Vancouver Island for 10 years? What started as a hobby in 1967 has gradually grown, and in that time we have watched with some interest the rise and fall of quite a few Tour Companies.

Most of our advertising in the past has been word of mouth, and nearly all of our customers travel with us on a regular basis. We know that if the customer is satisfied, they will come back. Beware of any company that advertises how good they are. This is your privilege, not theirs.

You will not see us advertise too often in the months to come. Just enough to let you know we might have just the tour you would like to take.

For your information, the following are the tours we will be sending this coming fall:

RENO
7-Day Tours
Departing on September 17th 24th, October 1st, November 19th and December 29th.

RENO
8-Day Tours
Departing October 15th.

Manila: colorful, steamy, hot is favorite spot for Japanese

TRAVEL TIPS

STAN DELAPHANE

Steamy, humid Manila. Where postage stamps weld together permanently. Envelopes seal themselves automatically. The air is a steam bath. The sunsets fill the world with gold, scarlet and purple.

"Mabuhay!" says the sign at the airport. (An all-purpose word like the Hawaiian aloha.)

Never much of a tourist stop. But last year they opened 14 new hotels. (Priced $54 double at the expensive Manila Peninsula. Or you can go to $300 for the MacArthur Suite in the noble old Manila, redone luxuriously with an added high-rise.)

In the original old Manila Hotel, there used to be white patches of paster on the room walls.

"Bullet holes, sir," said the Filipino bellboy. "General MacArthur lived here before the war. He wanted to live here again. So the Americans did not shell the Japs out, sir. They took each room carefully with the rifle and bayonet."

There were half a million tourists last year. Seven of 10 were Japanese.

We saw them on the Hovercraft that skims the water to Corregidor Island where the Americans surrendered in 1942. When we recaptured it, 13,000 men died — 10,000 were Japanese. Killed in banzai charges or by their own hands.

So the Japanese tourists go out there. Old and wrinkled. (Fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers?) They carry bunches of flowers. Walk among rusting cannon and shell-scarred walls.

They hold a prayer ceremony. Get back on the Hovercraft. And as they leave, cast their flowers into the sea.

"Manila plans 10,000 luxury hotel rooms," said the social directress at the Peninsula. She's the daughter of former President Magsaysay. Mila Magsaysay Valenzuela.

"Occupancy has run 40 to 50 per cent. But we hope for more. More Americans. Now it is Japanese. The prices are so low compared to Japan that a Japanese can spend a month here for what a week would cost at a resort in Japan."

Some 25 years ago, the Philippines hired Japanese divers to salvage wrecked warships in the harbor. They kept them on boats — away from land. Filipino armed guards were on the piers.

Abe who ran the dining room in the old Manila Hotel said: "If there were no guards we would swim out and kill the Japs, sir." He said: "There is a Filipino saying: 'Some things in life can never be forgiven. Life is too short to forget them.' "

Japanese generals stayed in the Manila Hotel. (Just behind it was the headquarters of the dreaded Kempei-tai. The military police.)

Manila has changed: Nobody carries a pistol. Every civilian used to pack hardware. Signs at nightclub cloakrooms said: Please check firearms here.

The Luneta — it swarmed with male prostitutes, the bini-boys — has been renamed Rizal Park. Families hold Sunday picnics there. (The bini-boys hang out at a night club called Coco Banana.)

President Marcos declared martial law five years ago. There's a curfew from 1 to 4. The honky-tonk night clubs that ran 24 hours a day have been tamed down.

The scars of war are mostly erased. Except for the old Spanish walled city Intramuros, blown beyond repair when American troops took it from stand-and-die Japanese marines.

The Death March from Bataan. Guerrillas in the hills. The hanged Japanese generals. They're mostly faded. But no other military cemeteries hold so many unknown soldiers. The cross marked:

Here Lies In Honored Glory
A Comrade In Arms
Known But To God

"Mabuhay? That is a Tagalog word, sir," said the waiter at the Peninsula. "It means I love you. Or sometimes, Hello." I said: "That's a useful word." He said: "Also it can mean goodbye." He said: "Or sometimes, victory."

Rural French tradition untouched

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

Life is civilized, values true, there's pride in hospitality

By MARGARET RHODES

CHAPELLE-EN-VERCORS, France — However deep one penetrates into rural France, with its mountains and rivers and forests, one can still count on a welcoming inn at evening. And however simple it may be, the patron will understand the importance of a well-cooked meal; he will probably be the chef as well as the owner, eager to recommend a special dish or a regional delicacy.

For no matter how far one goes off the beaten track, one will find a civilized approach to life, an awareness of true values, and a pride in receiving the traveller with traditional hospitality. Indeed, the more one is lost in the countryside, the truer this seems to be.

Everyone has his own favorite region, where the true France seems to live on unchanged through the generations. One such untouched spot is the Vercors, a mountain fastness in the Dauphine Alps.

Only 600 miles of driving from the Channel ports bring one right into the heart of the mountain-encircled plateau east of the Rhone Valley. Reached by tunnels and gorges, it seems to be a secret world.

The most direct route is via Troyes, Dijon, Bourg, and Grenoble. After crossing the Isere between Voreppe and Sassenage, one immediately starts the steep climb up into the Alps, rising to 3,000 feet at Engins, where the fantastic limestone cliffs, fir-clad slopes, streams, and gorges envelop one in an exhilarating new world of birdsong and running water and an immense peace.

The echoing Gorges de la Bourne reverberate with the sound of the car's engine: when that stops, one is engulfed in utter silence.

In a dreamy mood one coasts through flowery fields down to Chapelle-en-Vercors, where there is a choice of small hotels. From here one can explore this fascinating region at leisure.

First of all, one should double back and enter the sombre tunnels of the Grands Goulets, where the road is dwarfed by vast cliffs and precipices, before dropping 1,800 feet to the Petts Goulets, and then out into the sunlight again — and how welcome it is after being pinched in by the eerie limestone walls.

After St. Jean-en-Royans comes the magnificent road of the Cirque de Combe Laval, perhaps the most astounding of all the wonders of the Vercors, because everything is on such a vast scale — the phenomenal road cut in the towering cliff, looking across to the Cirque with a prodigious chasm between.

From this breathtaking height, the road climbs over the top even farther, up the Col de la Machine, to 5,000 feet, and is then swallowed up in the great Foret de Lente. This is Resistance country, a great hideout of the Maquis in the Second World War, and as one emerges from the forest, from the equally high Col De l'Achat, one looks down on an inpregnable-looking plateau.

Just as one realizes that the place is a natural fortress, one suddenly sees below the cemetery, the fresh flowers on the graves, and the monument to the Martyrs de Vercors.

For Vassieux-en-Vercors is one of France's tragic places. One night in 1944, the Maquis were prepared for an Allied supply drop. Instead they received a raid by German gliderborne troops who virtually wiped out the village.

It was rebuilt, but it is still strangely silent. Wreckage of the German planes has been left as a haunting memorial. It is a place which remains in the imagination long after it has been left behind.

From Vassieux-en-Vercors one can return by the Foret de Lente, and branch off westward for the Col de Bataille. The road takes one through woods to its amazing summit, where precipices drop down on either side.

From here one can swoop down to the great plain of the Rhone and the traffic steaming along the main roads. But it is more rewarding to make for the Col de Rousset from Vassieux, driving through the long tunnel to come out into sudden sunshine and a vast mountain panorama; below, 15 miles of superbly engineered hairpin bends wind down to Die on the Drome.

To leave, as one came to this hidden place, by a tunnel, emphasizes the feeling of having been admitted to a secret corner of France.

Die, cradled in a great bowl of the Dauphine Alps, with the lavender fields and fruit orchards of its richly fertile plain, is another splendid place to stay, sheltered by that spectacular wall of mountains.

As you set out from Die on the run back to the Channel ports, crossing the Rhone at Livron, don't forget to make a stop at the wild Ardeche, with its chestnut woods. And there are such glorious mountains around Villefort that one could spend another holiday climbing cols and gathering fir cones and searching out the source of the Lot and the Tarn. The mountain ashes blaze with scarlet all along the roadside in the autumn and the wild pansies and miniature daffodils are an enchantment in the spring.

But at the end of it all, it is the Vercors that stays in the mind as a hidden place of its own. We remember the shepherds and the sound of cowbells on those upland pastures, and the overwhelming limestone cliffs; and something even more unusual — the sound of silence.

Summer Pruning Requires Some Care

GARDENING
jack beastall

The summer pruning of fruit trees has been mentioned several times in this column. It is quite different from winter pruning which is done locally in late February.

There are very few texts around today outlining the method of benefits of summer pruning, although they were plentiful a hundred years ago.

The method was perfected in France and adjacent fruit growing areas at a time when the production of high quality apples and pears, both cooking and dessert types, was at its peak, and French nursery catalogs listed over one thousand varieties of apples and some eight hundred of pears.

Summer pruning is the only way of handling cordon and espaliered fruits. Its purpose is to limit long wood growths during the summer season and encourage more rapid production of fruiting spurs so as to obtain a large crop of excellent fruits from a relatively small tree.

Fruit tree pruning bulletins published in Canada and the U.S. are based on orchard practices. The commercial grower seeks large trees, a reasonable crop of medium quality fruits, and the minimum expense for labor to keep the trees in production.

These are not, or should not be, the aims of the home gardener. If it is felt necessary to produce fruit at home, even when commercial varieties are used, that fruit should be superior in quality and size to any found in markets.

Until the decision is made to plant a fruit tree most gardeners are unaware of the need of two compatible varieties of each fruit to obtain cross pollination and satisfactory crops.

Instead of four trees, one each of apple, pear, plum, and cherry, space must be found for eight trees, and nutritious vegetables, bush and cane fruits, flowers, and ornamental trees must be sacrificed to the dense shade that will cover most of a city lot.

It is easy to say we will forego vegetables, bush fruits, and flowers, sow the area to grass and enjoy our summer days in the shade of our fruit trees, but the idea will not work.

Fruit trees need deep irrigation about four times during the production season and fertilizer only in late February, whereas grass must be watered twice a week and fertilized once a month.

Too much water will affect the fruits, and any fertilizer reaching the fruit tree roots after spring growth commences will reduce the quality and texture of the fruits and shorten by many months their storage life.

Summer pruning is not practiced in commercial orchards for several reasons. First, no staff is available for the work, their time being occupied with cultivation, irrigation, and applying some 20 sprays in order to produce unblemished fruit that will pass inspection.

Secondly, there is no standard grade for improved quality that results from summer pruning, therefore only standard grade prices can be expected and these do not pay for the labor involved.

Thirdly, the orchardist needs big trees for maximum cropping, whereas summer pruning tends to keep the trees smaller.

The home gardener has the time in summer evenings to do a little pruning, desires a quality fruit not seen in the market, and is satisfied with smaller trees to suit the size of the garden.

Summer pruning is a modified form of the Lorette pruning which was practiced in the fruit gardens of large estates in the 19th century.

All growths which would normally extend to twelve or more inches in lenght on a healthy tree are nipped back to three or four full leaves. These shortened growths will, in a year or so, produce fruiting spurs.

The home is started as soon as the "June drop" of fruit is over, and continued until the end of August if necessary. June drop is the period when the trees discard fruits for several reasons; too much fruit set for the vigor of the tree; no seeds forming due to poor pollination or insect damage; or fertilizer reaching the roots and causing excessive wood growth.

When the tips of all new growths are removed the tree loses some of its foliage therefore has less leaf surface that can synthesize food Coming at a time when the fruit is swelling, the tree will supply the fruits to assure mature seeds, and there will be less surplus for making new wood growth, which results, over the years, in a smaller tree.

Obviously we cannot drastically reduce the tree's food supply in one day or we shall run into trouble. The reduction must be made gradually on established trees from late June to the end of August, and the amount taken at one time reasonably balanced all around the tree.

Since each fruit tree is an entity to itself, its habit of growth having been controlled by previous pruning and its vigor by the condition of the soil, it is impossible to state any fixed method to follow or amounts to be removed. The tree itself must be our guide.

My method is to study the tree carefully and try to estimate the percentage of leaf surface that is likely to be removed and how much can be safely taken at one time.

Next, I mentally divide the tree into layers from the lowest branches to the tip, using 2 ft. intervals. A 12 ft. distance would mean 6 layers.

Starting on the lowest layer I nip a few new growths all around the tree, circling it three or four times until I feel the limit for one pruning has been reached. All new growths at that level may not have been nipped, but these will be done later.

Five or six days later the lower layer is completed. In another six days the second layer is done, and so on to the top of the tree, always trying to take an equal amount from all around the tree so that no single branch is drastically nipped at one time.

As the season progresses small new growths will elongate and be ready to nip, and some of the growths nipped earlier will send out side shoots which are nipped just above the second leaf.

There is no fixed schedule to follow, the work is done at the gardener's leisure, in the cool of the evening, over a period of 8 to 10 weeks according to the earliness of the June drop.

Young fruit trees, summer pruned from the start, will come into production earlier than winter pruned trees, and are no problem to handle. Established trees that have fruited for several years will need careful study and planning before the work is started. Old trees, properly pruned, will not benefit much from summer pruning.

Several gardeners have asked "Can I summer prune my fruit trees this week?" and "Is it time now to cut off some big branches?"

It is hoped this column will clearly indicate that summer and winter pruning are not the same. Winter pruning shapes the trees. Summer pruning controls excessive wood growth, improves fruit quality, and reduce winter pruning to a minimum.

WORK FOR WEEK

Evergreen hedges such as privet, box, hedge-honeysuckle (Lonicera nitida) and Thuya will need another trimming if to be kept shapely. With a young laurel hedge it is a matter of shortening each shoot with secateurs to half length when it grows six inches.

Ventilate greenhouse freely, night and day. Shade individual ornamental plants inside as needed, or apply shading over all glass outside to lessen heat buildup inside.

Peonies need old flower heads removed before seeds being growing. Don't forget continued watering aids in prolonging season of bloom and also keep leaves actively feeding roots for next year's flowers.

Limit dahlia growth to two or three strong stems to a plant. Dwarf varieties will be coming into bloom. Remove fading flowers promptly for continued bloom.

Sweet pepper, okra and melon plants need warm sheltered spot outdoors, also eggplants. It pays to build a rough coldframe for these, about 24 inches deep with glass sloping a little westward to catch late sun. Glass goes on at night.

Draw soil away from onions as they begin to swell. This is essential for developing good bulbous roots. Same with shallots, but garlic can be just barely covered but in warm soil.

Sow radish seed with seed of white summer turnips. Try also between cabbage as prevention of root maggots. They will go to radishes which are then pulled up and burned.

Sow Wando peas, sugar pod peas, beets, leaf lettuce.

Britons Rally Around Tanner

LONDON (CP) — Some call it a "tanner." Others refer to it as a "tiddler."

It's smaller than a dime, gets lost in the fluff in the bottom of the pocket and slides through the smallest hole in the lining.

It's the halfpenny, or ha'penny, and the British are saying "hands off."

Marcus Lipton, Labor MP for Central Lambeth, has caused a furore by calling for the abolition of "the wretched halfpenny coin."

Not only that, he wants the old, traditional sixpence scrapped.

Marian Green of the Federation of Old Age Pension Associations, says "yes, it is a fiddling little coin and very difficult for old folks to handle.

"But we wouldn't want to see it abolished."

If the tiddler goes, she reasons, so will prices — up by half a penny, and "any increase no matter how small, hits people on fixed incomes."

Les Seeney, director-general of the National Chamber of Trade, says "we have never cared much for the tanner."

Calling it something of an anachronism, Seeney says the coin does, however, "provide for another pricing point."

"I would have thought that it remains a useful tool in the battle against inflation."

A spokesman for the Consumers' Association reasons that if the halfpenny goes, 1p becomes the smallest possible increase and "people might care to remember that 1p represents 2.4 old pence."

Weddings

Lister-Paget

St. John's Anglican Church was the scene of a very pretty double-ring ceremony at 2 p.m. on Saturday, May 7, 1977, when Maureen Jill, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Noël Paget, Victoria, B.C. became the bride of Gerald Keith Lister, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. Lister of Richmond, B.C. Picturesque standards of pink and white gladioulus, carnations, daisies and baby's breath, decorated the church where the wedding communion was solemnized by Canon Grahame Baker.

The petite bride, given in marriage by her father, looked exquisite in a Victorian styled wedding gown of silk organza over taffeta. The fitted bodice fashioned with a high necked yoke of Venice lace, was bordered with a soft frill. Deep flounces enhanced the short puffed sleeves. Lace encircled the waist. The "A" line skirt featured a deep flounce at the hemline, bordered with lace. A Chapel veil starred with pearls misted from a lace headpiece embroidered with pearls. She carried her white Bible topped with a white orchid surrounded by pink carnations, baby's breath and cascading ivy. Gail Turney of Vancouver, acted as Maid of Honour, and bridesmaids were Debbie Hagstrom, cousin of the bride, and Margot and Michelle Paget, the bride's sisters. All wore identical gowns of pale mint green cotton over taffeta, and carried colonial bouquets of white daisies, pink carnations, and cascading ivy. Bands of daisies were worn in their hair. The groom was attended by Chris White as best man, and Ron Lister, the groom's brother, John Wheeler and Mike Paget, brother of bride, served as ushers. They were all attired in dusty rose tuxedos with white ruffled shirts. The bride's mother wore a white cotton knit gown with a corsage of pink sweetheart roses. The mother of the groom chose a gown of pale blue polyester, and she also wore a corsage of pink sweetheart roses.

The reception was held under beautiful sunny skies at the Victoria Golf Club. Mr. Gerald Neely acted as Master of Ceremonies, and the bride's uncle Mr. Norris Paget proposed the toast to the bride.

Following the reception, the happy couple left on a wedding trip to Hawaii. Maureen chose a navy pant suit with red accessories and an orchid corsage. Mr. and Mrs. Lister are now residing in Vancouver.

Christensen-Samouelle

Reverend R. Sansom officiated at a double-ring ceremony in Holy Trinity Anglican Church in Sidney, on May 28, 1977, at 2 p.m., when Diane Samouelle, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Samouelle, exchanged wedding vows with Bjarne Christensen, youngest son of Mrs. Carla Christensen of Aalborg, Denmark, and the late Mr. Christensen.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a floor length Scandinavian style dress. She wore a headpiece of miniature carnations and tiny rust roses, and carried a basket filled with carnations, roses and baby's breath. The maid of Honour was the groom's sister Mrs. Birte Mallet of New Westminster, B.C. She wore a floor length gown of pale pink and mauve, and carried pink carnations and white daisies. Mr. Bob Christensen, the groom's brother of Edmonton, Alberta, attended as best man, and the ushers were Mr. Alf Moore, London, England, and Mr. Brian Russell, Kamano, B.C.

Out of town guests were from Edmonton, Alberta; Vancouver, Kamano, B.C. and London, England.

Following a reception at the Brentwood Inn, Mr. and Mrs. Christensen left for a short wedding trip to Vancouver and Seattle, Wash., to then return to Victoria where they will live.

Ferris-Emery

Oak Bay Beach Hotel was a lovely setting for the double-ring ceremony at 2 p.m. on Saturday, May 14th, 1977, when Patricia Maybelle, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Parnell Emery, Victoria, B.C. and Patrick Douglas Ferris, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Clayton Ferris, Prince George, B.C. exchanged wedding vows. Rev. Dr. H. Kerley officiated.

The bride was presented in marriage by her parents. Soloist Mrs. Mary Youson sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "O, Perfect Love" accompanied at the piano by Deborah Mills. The bride was attended by Mrs. Isobel Reid, and the groom by his brother Kenneth. David and Timothy Ferris ushered the guests. The toast to the bride was proposed by the bride's older brother David. Kathy Gray was in charge of the Guest Book.

After the reception, Patrick and Patricia left on a wedding trip along the Oregon Coast, and to Jasper and Banff. Before going to their home in Fort St. John, the couple attended the 1977 Convocation at U.B.C., where Patricia received her Bachelor of Science degree in nursing.

Mitchell-Tabuteau

Standards of mauve, purple lilacs, formed a beautiful wedding setting, in the garden of the bride's parents May 14, 1977, when Rev. John Travis, officiated at a ceremony uniting Laurie Guinivere Tabuteau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Tabuteau, to Glenn Emerson Mitchell, nephew of Mrs. Eva Deanocky, Duncan.

The bride, given in marriage by her father and mother, wore a white gown with a lace edged train. The radiant bride wore a crown of lace with cascading finger-tip veil. She carried a white basket filled with purple and white lilacs, fern. To attend her were, Miss Sheila Rogers, maid of honour, and Miss Cynthia le Huquet, who wore identical long gowns of blue with mauve pattern. They carried baskets of lilacs and blue daisies. The bride's mother wore a long sleeved, long gown of mauve jersey with floral accessories. The groom's aunt wore a floral long gown and orchid corsage. The groom's best man was Rick Westaway, and friend Jim Johnson. Toasts were proposed to the bride by Mr. Ed Rogers, and to the bride's brother, by the groom, on the occasion of his birthday. During the signing of the Register, the bride's great aunt sang "Unless."

Out of town guests were from Edmonton, Banff, Vancouver, Belleville, Waterloo, Ontario. Telegrams were read from New Zealand, Banff, Vancouver. After a honeymoon in Colorado, the newlyweds made their home in Vancouver.

39 PERSONALS

YOUR CITY WATCHDOG REPORT
Number Five. Your city's Watchdog C. Joe Richards attended the Oak Bay Council meeting on Monday, June 6th, and was surprised to see Victoria's Mayor Young in attendance. Your Watchdog was pleased to see that two important public hearings were held, one of which By-law number 3205 stated that there shall be provided at least two paved parking spaces for every Family residence built in the future, and the other was By-law number 3209 sixth Zoning By-law Amendment By-law, 1977, dealing with two family dwellings. It appears that Oak Bay members of council after the public Hearing for the Sixth Zoning By-law Amendment By-law, 1977, defeated the rezoning after hearing a good number of objections from Residents of the area. I was also pleased to see Mr. Neil Swainson speak against the rental arrangement for the ground floor of the proposed Broughton Street Library. Also it was interesting to observe that when the Oak Bay Council defeated the Library Rental Proposal it brought about a quick meeting of the two Mayors outside the Council Chambers in the parking lot. Your city's Watchdog believes that for the benefit of our Senior Citizens we should keep The Library where it is (one block from city centre) and negotiate buying the adjoining properties. If you agree with your City's Watchdog C. Joe Richard or have any further information regarding the way the City's business is being conducted these days, please phone 383-6259.

308-A CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our deep appreciation to Dr. Stratton and Dr. Gouws, nurses and staff for attention and care at the General Hospital. Thanks to our friends and neighbors for the fruit basket, gifts, flowers and cards, while Mattew was ill at the General Hospital. God took Matthew in His care. Thanks to Pastor H. Bickel for the beautiful spoken words and blessing for Matthew's voyage towards the Golden Gate. Thanks to all our friends and neighbors, the B.C. Hydro Employees, the South Vancouver Island Rangers, and the International Brotherhood. The flower arrangements and cards have been beautiful. — Klara Ball and Family.

The gratitude in our hearts can never be fully expressed, but we want our friends, relatives, and neighbours to know how much their kind words and expressions of sympathy have meant to us during our recent time of sorrow in the sad loss of our husband and father, Peter A. Rashleigh. Special thanks to those who sent Gideon Bibles, Memorial gifts, floral offerings and cards. Gone to be with Christ Jesus which is far better. Mrs. Janet Rashleigh and family.

309 IN MEMORIAM

FLINTOFF — In loving memory of our mother, Daphne, who passed away June 12, 1975.
Deborah and Christine.
Sadly missed by her daughters.

FLINTOFF — In loving memory of a dear wife, Daphne Muriel, who passed away June 12, 1975.
Past her sufferings, past her pain,
Cease to weep for tears are vain;
She who suffered is at rest
Gone to Heaven with the blest.
—Sadly missed and always remembered by her husband, Brian.

HAMILL — In remembrance of a kind husband, Alfred, who passed into Eternal life June 13, 1974.
A smile for all a heart of gold
None better could this world hold
Fond memories linger like leaves of gold
They do not tarnish or grow old.
—Missing you always, Agnes.

In Loving Memory of John Normand, who passed away on June 12th, 1976.
Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear.
Fond memories linger every day
Remembrance keeps him near
And never forgotten.
—Wife, Anne, daughters, Linda and Marlene, son, Bob and grandchildren.

309 IN MEMORIAM

POTTINGER — Clara Emily, June 11, 1975.
Deeply loved and missed. Until we meet again, Mom.
Claire and Dadie

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEAR'S CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

Arson Charge Laid

A 23-year-old man will appear in provincial court Monday charged with arson in connection with a fire in an Esquimalt apartment early Friday.

An Esquimalt police spokesman said the man, whose name has not been realeased, was arrested Friday.

Tenants were evacuated as firemen fought the blaze.

Ont. Tories Erred: Wallace

Dr. Scott Wallace, provincial Progressive Conservative leader, said Friday that Ontario Premier William Davis seriously misjudges the mood of the Ontario people when he called a provincial election.

Wallace said Davis' misjudgement was reflected in his inability to achieve a majority government in Thursday's election.

The basic ground rules of politics have changed, he said with other province's adopting British Columbia's confrontation-style politics.

Wallace said the beginning of confrontation in Ontario was established with the use of Tory advertisements condemning the actions of the former New Democratic Party government in B.C. This seriously misfired, he said, pushing Ontario Conservatives toward the Liberal Party.

Hawaiians Play Bandshell Sunday

Sixty-two young Hawaiians will perform Sunday in the Cameron Bandshell at Beacon Hill Park. The Band and Hawaiian Ensemble of The Kamehameha Schools is making its second visit to Victoria.

The students are all of Hawaiian ancestry, a condition for attending the famous Kamehameha Schools, and will present a varied program of band music as well as singing and dancing the traditional songs and chants of their home islands.

The young Polynesians are in Victoria as guests of the Oak Bay school bands, and are performing also in Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego.

Sunday's concert starts at 2:30 p.m.

Irate Homeowner Billing Bonner

CHILLIWACK (CP)— Michael Dean doesn't like B.C. Hydro's new 'service charge" so he's presenting Hydro chairman Robert Bonner with an itemized charge for turning on the lights in the Dean home.

"If Bonner is making a service charge for poles which are already up, then I can charge him for switching on my lights," Dean said in an interview Friday.

Since March 1, Hydro has been billing residential electricity users $3 every two months as a service charge. Natural gas users are billed $6.50 every two months.

"After all, without me turning on the lights he wouldn't make any money," Dean said.

"As ridiculous as my bill is, so is this service charge," he said. "It's just an excuse to make us pay more without raising the rates."

Dean, 67, said the service charge is particularly hard on old and poor people.

"Governments are elected to make sure the wealth is distributed around," but this isn't happening," he said.

"They say we have a free enterprise system, but there's nothing free about (B.C. Hydro's) enterprise," Dean said. "I can't go elsewhere if I don't like the amount of money they charge me."

Youngster's Who's Who In the Calling Cards

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — About 9,000 corporate presidents and heads of state have left their calling cards with 13-year-old Ross Tretheway.

He solicited most of the cards by mail and, at his request, most came back autographed. "A few people don't sign them or don't send cards because they say they're too expensive, but I get about an 80-to 90-percent response," he says.

Ross's collection of 19 scrap books, with business cards neatly taped in place, stands about 2½ feet high and weighs more than 40 pounds.

He has cards from England, France, Spain, Japan, Sweden, Finland, Cuba, Singapore, Brazil, Russia, Mexico, the Bahamas, Lebanon, the United States and Canada.

"Most people think it's a strange hobby," he says, "But I think it's fascinating."

He receives about 300 cards a week, but with a goal of 100,000 he has a long way to go.

Ross has signed cards from former prime minister John Diefenbaker, Joe Clark, Flora MacDonald, Keith Norton, John Turner, Robert Bourassa and Jean Drapeau. He has cards from New York mayor Abraham Beame, the late Chicago mayor Richard Daley, Senator Wilbur Mills and Senator Wayne Hayes, to name a few.

All major unions are represented and so are hundreds of corporations—such as Bell Canada, Canadian National Railways, Canadian Pacific Ltd. and banks.

The only business persons he has trouble with are from the U.S.S.R. "Russians aren't in competitive business, so they don't usually have cards."

In the four years since he started his collection, Ross has written to every city in Canada with a population of more than 5,000 persons and will do the same in the U.S.; so far he has covered the states from A to C.

He has received updated cards from several cities. One series show a man's career in Richmond, Calif. The first in the series reads Nathaniel (Nat) Bates, councilman. The next loses its folksiness—the Nat disappears and now it's Nathaniel Bates, vice-mayor. The final one reads Nathaniel Bates, mayor.

The cards come from all over the world. All are the same size, but some are made of cardboard, plastic, leather, wood, aluminum, steel, three-dimensional graphics, magnetized material, felt, photographic paper, x-ray paper and self-adhesive material with peel-off backings.

Ross's oldest card comes from a California hotel that was advertising rooms for $1 to $3 a night in 1938.

A stock-brokerage firm in Toronto had Ross checked before they sent him an autographed card because an expert forger could have had a heyday.

Venezuela Short-Handed

By GERRARDO INCHAUSTI

CARACAS (Reuter) — Lack of skilled manpower may upset Venezuela's rapid economic growth.

Economists fear ambitious development programs might be hindered unless the government builds its own pool of skilled workers or secures foreign labor.

Venezuela's five-year development plan up to 1980 includes the construction of roads and railways, power stations, steel mills and petrochemical plants.

Immigration officials estimate that at least 30,000 foreigners; mostly from neighboring Latin American countries, are expelled annually for entering illegally or violating the conditions of their stay.

About 200,000 other foreigners without proper documents are believed to be working in the country.

Economist Rolando Rodriguez, director of the government's manpower department, said that unless new labor pools are tapped the country's current five-year plan would fail.

Venezuela is building its own labor resources by retraining workers and providing scholarships for thousands of students to study here and abroad.

But supply still is limited and the manpower department is extending its recruitment efforts abroad.

The department's job is to coordinate the labor requirement of private industry and various state organizations and work in conjunction with the Intergovernmental Committee for European Migration (ICEM) to attract skilled immigrants.

ICEM, which was set up after the Second World War, helps developing countries, through selective migration, get the skilled technicians they require.

Of the South American countries, Venezuela has the highest per-capita income, the highest standard of living and the lowest rate of inflation, but vast areas of the country still are underpopulated.

Ten per cent of the country's total population of 12 million are foreign immigrants.

Mixed Blessing From Oil

By VINCENT AUIST

STAVANGER, Norway Reuter — Norwegians are finding that an oil boom is a mixed blessing.

Aside from problems like the blowout at the Bravo rig in the huge Ekofisk field, there are less obvious social strains affecting residents and oil workers.

In Stavanger, the oil port town for the Ekofisk field, hotels, rooms and guest houses are permanently filled with thousands of American, British, French, Dutch and German oil technicians.

"The people here don't want to spend money unnecessarily," said one local engineer. "We are using the same small airport and aircraft sometimes have to be stacked up for half an hour. They are also helicopter port that Hitler built during the war."

The elite in the oil fields — the divers — earn between $50,000 to $55,000 a year and they count on not paying taxes. But recently the Norwegian government introduced new regulations making it compulsory for oil companies to reveal their total work force at all times.

Drinking also has contributed to the tensions between the oil men and the local people, with hundreds of teenagers drinking in dockside cafes.

"This is something the oil has brought and we think it is going to get worse," said a middleaged waitress.

By contrast, a Norwegian engineer said "The laws here are so strict that if I sit out on my lawn with a drink in my hand, my neighbor can telephone the police and they will come and tell me that I have to go indoors."

Another problem for the Norwegian authorities is keeping track of who is working on the oilfield.

"There are 62 different nationalities out there working off shore in the North Sea and this makes our task of controlling events that much more difficult," said Stavanger's police chief, Oscar Frank.

The Norwegian authorities know that hundreds of oil workers from Spain, Italy, Turkey and Yugoslavia are brought into the North Sea secretly and never registered.

"It's difficult to catch them," a Norwegian official said, "because you have a character in Luxembourg who arranges for those workers to come in on a four-month contract."

Many environmentalists see the oil industry as an exploiter which, whes the oil is exhausted, will move out leaving the local people to clear up the mess.

What they fear most is a rapid shore development in some small town. This would draw in workers from the surrounding farm and fishing villages and, when the oil is gone, would collapse, leaving behind a disrupted way of life, a totally corrupted youth and a mass of rusting, unusable metal scarring the landscape.

Large quantities of oil are believed to exist all around the coast and especially above the 62nd parallel which would open up thousands of new jobs and bring prosperity to many small towns, at least for a decade.

It also would help the government dispose of its foreign debts, continue to enlarge subsidies to fishermen and farmers and import capital equipment and consumer goods.

But fitting these huge revenues into the Norwegian economy might produce inflation, high wages and high unit output costs. It would aggravate the present position in which Norwegian exports already are having trouble finding ready markets.

Mobile Home Lawsuit

SURREY (CP) — Lee Tretheway of Port Alberni has launched a small claims court action here against the owners of a Surrey mobile home park for sales commissions.

Tretheway says in the suit that she had to pay sales commissions amounting to $1,169 as a result of three sales transactions with George and Rita Johnston, owners of the Johnston Villa trailer park.

The claim, launched Wednesday, is to recover only $1,000, the allowable limit for small claims court actions.

Tretheway said the sales commissions were paid on three occasions, two in 1974 when she sold a smaller unit and bought a larger one and again in 1976 when she moved to Port Alberni.

Bloodhounds, Helicopters Tracking Ray

PETROS, Tenn. (AP) — Searchers using bloodhounds said today they had James Earl Ray, convicted assassin of Martin Luther King Jr., and four other convicts trapped and "going in circles" within five square miles of snake-infested mountain terrain near the prison they fled by ladder.

One of the convicts surrendered to authorities and searchers said they twice came within hearing or sight of the others but were unable to capture them.

Ray, serving a 99-year term, bolted over a wall of the maximum-security Brushy Mountain State Prison about 7 p.m. Friday. He used a ladder made of light pipe stolen from a workshop.

The FBI took charge of the case today, put Ray on its list of 10 Most Wanted Fugitives, and formally charged all the escapees with conspiring to violate a 1946 federal law against unlawful flight to avoid confinement. Additional charges were expected to be filed by Tennessee authorities.

State police, FBI agents and prison personnel manned roadblocks to seal off the area as about 150 law enforcement officials trudged through the thick underbrush on the steep terrain, where temperatures overnight fell to the low 50s.

Three helicopters probed the heavy foliage of the mountainous area with infrared equipment capable of detecting human body heat beneath the overgrowth.

State Corrections Commissioner Murray Henderson said the men were "pretty much going in circles. They just don't know the territory."

Meanwhile, Nashville lawyer Jack Kershaw, who is acting for Ray, said Ray's escape "is a total urprie to me."

"I talked with him this week and he indicated nothing of this nature. His plans were definitely oriented to a new trial with renewed confidence," Kershaw said. "This must have been an hysterical, spur-of-the-moment thing."

President Carter ordered Attorney-General Griffin Bell to give state offjcials whatever assistance he could and FBI Director Clarence Kelly personally ordered his agents into the case Friday night.

A seventh fugitive, shot by guards as he scaled the wall of the maximum security Brushby Mountain State Prison on a makeshift ladder, was recaptured immediately. He was treated at a hospital for what officers called a superficial gunshot wound.

Hotel Vancouver 'Hot'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Federation of Labor Friday placed a hot declaration on the Hotel Vancouver and announced an all-out campaign of support for the hotel's striking employees.

Four hundred and seventy-five members of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers' Union walked off the job at noon Thursday to back demands for a wage increase.

The strike spread to a downtown laundry Friday as 10 pickets from the union protested the handling of their work by the non-union laundry.

Len Guy, secretary-treasurer of the federation, said Friday that the hotel management had refused to make any wage offer and was attempting to use strike-breakers to keep the hotel operating.

He said a meeting has been scheduled for Monday for staff representatives of all unions affiliated with the federation to plan strategy.

BULLETS THREATEN PIPELINE

FAIRBANKS (AP) — At least 50 bullets have been fired at the trans-Alaska oil pipeline and in at least two instances bullet dents have required the replacement of short segments of pipe, the Fairbanks News-miner reports.

The newspaper reported Friday there is no indication any of the bullets have pierced the half-inch steel pipe. Tests have shown a high-powered rifle bullet could pierce the line.

Engineers for Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., the consortium of eight oil companies building the $8 billion, 800-mile line from Prudhoe Bay to Valdez, say such an occurrence could endanger the marksman. They report oil pressure during pipeline operation will be such that a hole could release a needle-like stream of oil with enough force to injure or kill the shooter.

But a government pipeline monitor, noting one cutout was required hear an area used by sportsmen for target shooting, said, "the only way they're going to keep the pipe from getting holes in it is to armorplate it."

About half the line is built above the ground to protect delicate permafrost from the hot-oil line under stipulations of the Trans-Alaska Pipeline Authorization Act.

Strata Title Loophole Cutting Lot Sizes

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Central Saanich developers and the municipality's own building inspector are using a loophole in the law to circumvent zoning and community plan intentions, Mayor Jean Butler said today.

The loophole enables them to place the lots under the Strata Titles Act and subdivide and sell them at below the size called for in the zoning.

The device to get the lots under the Strata Titles Act amounts to simply placing concrete blocks or pillars on the property and having them surveyed.

Mayor Butler mentioned Lisbon Holdings and Dr. Howard McDairmid, Dave Thomson and D. F. Hanley, all with land in the Mount Newton Crossroad area.

Zoning calls for lots not smaller than 10 acres in some cases and some of these have been sub-divided, using the Strata Titles Act loophole, down to lots of about 2½ acres.

"Out own building inspector, Norman Porter, is another who had taken this kind of action."

Residents in the Mount Newton area are "up in arms" about it and want it stopped, she said.

Wording in the act refers to "support structures" intended to be or to support a building foundation, said Gay Wheller, assistant administrator in Central Saanich.

When these have been surveyed in on a lot, they enable it to be registered under the act and the sub-dividing to go ahead.

He said he understands the same sort of activity has been going on elsewhere in the province and the provincial government is concerned.

Mayor Butler said she met with Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis in Sidney Friday and while she didn't get a good reception, he promised to try to do something about it Monday. The provincial legislature resumes sitting that day.

Wheeler said there is one case in the municipality where a lot intended under the zoning to be a minimum five acres has been subdivided down to about half-acre lots.

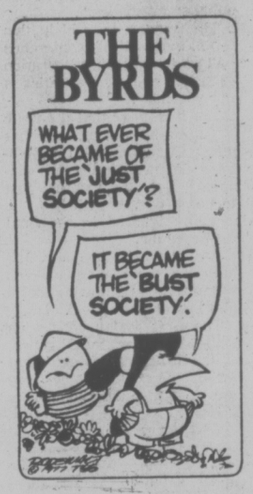
Troops Storm Gunmen, 8 Dead But 53 Freed



ASSEN (AP) — Dutch commandos backed by jet planes and armored cars stormed a train and school at dawn today and freed 53 hostages held for 20 days by South Moluccan gunmen. Two hostages and six of the 13 gunmen were killed.

The government said 12 persons—one terrorist, two commandos and nine hostages— were wounded.

All of those killed were aboard the train. A government spokesman said the hostages were killed when they sprang to their feet during a brief firefight.

Justice Minister Andreas van Agt said they were not killed by the troops, implying they were shot by the terrorists.

"There were indications about the health of the hostages that were so bad, and there was the risk that the situation would become even worse," Van Agt said. "We were also afraid of the increasingly harder attitude of the terrorists toward the hostages."

Premier Joop den Uyl told reporters the terrorists, demanding independence from Indonesia for their Pacific island homeland, had threatened the lives of the hostages several times since the hijackings began May 23.

The government gave no official account of the raid. But an officer who asked not to be identified said the raids began just before sunrise when five F104 jet planes thundered over the train, where most of the hostages were held.

While 35 marksmen opened up with covering fire and smoke bombs, 30 commandos sprang from nearby foxholes, blasted open the door of the train with plastic explosives and burst inside, subduing the Moluccans with bursts of automatic weapons fire.

N-BOMB BAN TALKS UNDERWAY

WASHINGTON (NYT) — The U.S. and the Soviet Union will begin discussions Monday in Washington on a possible agreement to ban all explosions of nuclear devices, the state department announced Friday.

President Jimmy Carter has made such an accord one of the priority arms control goals of his administration.

According to U.S. officials, despite the strains in over-all Soviet-U.S. relations, the Soviet side has been receptive to seeking an agreement on banning all nuclear explosions.

They also stressed that discussions in this field have been going on for many years and have remained immune from the general atmosphere in relations, although major progress in the talks would of course be translated as a sign of improved ties.

Executive Hikes Probed by AIB

OTTAWA (CP) — The Anti-Inflation Board is conducting "an informal investigation" into salary increases up to $60,000 won by top executives of some corporations, a board official said Friday.

The investigation was initiated after published deports said that while anti-inflation guides hold hourly-rated workers to a maximum annual increases of $2,400, some bosses, like the president of Kaiser Resources Ltd., took a pay raise of $60,363 last year.

L. C. Morrison, director-general of communications for the Anti-Inflation Board, said Friday in a telephone interview that the board's compensation branch is investigating some of the raises.

One of the problems the compensation branch faces is that it must consider as a group salary increases for corporate executives.

As long as the average salary increase of each member in the group does not exceed $2,400, the increase likely will be within the anti-inflation guides. This means that one executive might receive a pay raise of $5,000, for example, as long as other members of the group received token increases to keep the average to $2,400.

Also, Morrison said, many companies include cash or stock bonuses as part of executives' compensation. Some of these arrangements were entered into before the anti-inflation regulations came into effect in October, 1975, and they vary with the company's success. The board has to consider, in applying the guides, whether a company had a particularly bad year just before the guides came into effect, and decide upon the allowable amount of the bonus accordingly.

Among the big increases in 1976 reported were: A $17,250 increase for the president of Imperial Oil Ltd. to a salary of $251,600; a $20,000 increase to a salary of $370,833 for the president of Massey-Ferguson Ltd., and a jump of more than $22,000 to a salary of $55,000 for the president of Canadian Homestead Oil Ltd. of Calgary.

RAPIDS SHOT IN BARREL

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Karel Soucek, 30, a Hamilton stuntman, successfully shot the Niagara River rapids in a barrel today.

After successfully shooting the rapids, he spent about three hours trapped in a whirlpool, but was rescued by a helicopter.

Parks police stopped Soucek from attempting the same stunt last Tuesday.

They charged him today with stunting without a licence. The charge carries a maximum fine of $100.

Quebec 'Softens' French

Times News Services.

QUEBEC CITY — Businesses in Quebec with 100 employees or more will have four to six years to obtain government certificates proving that French is used in their operations.

And three-year temporary certificates will be issued to business firms once they begin a "francization" program, Cultural Development Minister Camille Laurin told the National Assembly Friday in tabling regulations for Bill One, the PQ government's proposed language legislation.

Laurin described the regulations as "a softening" of the rules governing Quebec's current language law, Bill 22, which was passed by the former Liberal government in 1974.

He said the temporary certificates will be for a three-year period rather than for the present two.

Under Bill One, businesses may lose their operation permits if they fail to obtain "francization" certificates attesting that French is the language of work in their internal communications, manuals and advertising.

Meanwhile, Quebec's Chambre de commerce said in a 200-page report that the province would suffer major economic losses in terms of jobs, revenues, growth and investment if the language charter is adopted as it now stands. However, if certain clauses in the charter are amended it is possible to offset the losses without affecting the aims of the bill.

Unless relatively unimportant changes are made to the charter companies will continue leaving the province and thousands of Quebecers will be deprived of jobs, the authors say. Clauses in the language legislation forcing businesses in the province to make French their working language are alienating companies on which Quebec depends for its economic growth and development, they add.

Liquor Stores to Be Hit If Gov't Workers Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — For the first time since it was given full bargaining rights in 1974, the British Columbia Government Employees Union (BCGEU) says it will take an over-all strike vote this summer if it fails to get a master contract by July 31.

John Fryer, general-secretary for the union, said Friday that liquor board employees are likely the ones to strike while the rest of the 31,000-member union keeps them on full pay.

"We will be shutting down a target group ... that will be kept on full salary by assessing the others," said Fryer. "We will be picking on a group that will create maximum pressure."

Fryer, speaking on the eve of the BCGEU's biennial convention, said a shutdown of the liquor board will affect not only the average citizen, but also the hotel industry.

"It will be difficu:t for these bible-thumpers to rule them back to work," he said. "It's pretty hard to call the legislature back in and declare the liquor board essential."

Fryer said the union's bargaining proposals were "very, very modest," with the total package unlikely to exceed 10 per cent. He said the wage increase was not as important as the cost of living clause.

Priorities include job security and protection for employees transferred to and-or displaced by Crown corporations. This issue came to the fore with creation of the B.C. Ferry Corp., which dropped 500 employees, and the B.C. Building Corp., which may cost 800 to 900 civil servants their jobs.

The BCGEU also wants health and welfare benefits for casual workers, dental and extended medical plans for retired government employees, special occupational health and safety training for safety officers, a long term disability plan and paid education leave.

Trudeau Raps Black Double Standard

By FRANK RUTTER
Times London Bureau

LONDON — Prime Minister Trudeau Friday challenged black Africa to force a cutoff of oil supplies to Rhodesia, a move he said would topple the white supremacist regime quicker than any new sanctions.

"It is a puzzlement to me that some African nations, some of which are members of OPEC, haven't urged turning off the supply of oil to Rhodesia," Trudeau said at a press conference as the Commonwealth Conference here broke up for the weekend.

The black members have been pressing the Commonwealth to adopt tougher sanctions both against Rhodesia and South Africa.

The dominant theme of the Commonwealth conference here is race. There might be discussion of other things, but beneath the cosmetics the issue is skin color, and what that means in Africa.

Trudeau's comments were abrasive ones, as were subsequent remarks both inside and outside the conference.

He accused black Africans of using double standards in criticizing white mercenaries but not Cuban interveners. He threw in their face their complaints about Western multinational oil companies fuelling Ian Smith's armored cars and hunter jets, claiming that the black Africans had more leverage with their "friends" in OPEC, indeed some — like Nigeria — were members of it, in using oil as a weapon in Rhodesia.

Then he deliberately raised the issue of Uganda, which most others had tried to avoid, by insisting that the conference formally condemn President Idi Amin for mass murder. Black condemnations of Amin had been carefully phrased outside the conference, and some participants even complained that he should be in London.

All that he said might be true. It might also find hearty agreement from other white Commonwealth leaders, but they have not so far chosen to express themselves in that way.

New Zealand's Robert Muldoon, on the spot because his country plays games with South African athletes, declared himself fully behind the "Maputo declaration," a fiery document drawn up by the militant black nations in Mozambique last month.

Trudeau, in contrast, declared frankly that he had never read the Maputo declaration. He said cheerfully

—Max Low photos.

Sarah Carr, naturalist Jim Bennett . . . spotting sea lions

Sea, Songs and Smiles

Perched high on the rocks of Box Island, above tidal pools packed with crabs and starfish and overlooking the majestic sweep of Long Beach, a host of small faces eagerly scanned the vast Pacific Ocean.

"Keep looking all of you, because there are whales out there," Parks Canada naturalist Jim Bennett told the 15 Grade 4 students from Elsie Miles Elementary School in Shawnigan Lake.

Then he grinned.

"Okay, what do you know about whales?"

And suddenly, without a cue from anyone, the kids burst into the chorus of Whales Have Tails, a happy little song written by their teacher Judy Latimer.

Whales have tails and they live in the sea,
Whales are mammals like you and me;
Whales are a wonderful sight to see,
So Please, save the whales.

If they had been able to remember every single word the young naturalist used to describe whales during his slide show the night before, or if they'd quoted straight from a biology textbook, those kids couldn't have told Jim Bennett anything he'd like to hear more about whales then they did in that chorus and verses that went with it.

As the voices rang out around the rocks and the small faces beamed with excitement and happiness, Jim was lost for words. He was so moved that it was some time before he could say anything. And when he did, it was to invite the class back to the naturalist headquarters to record their song.

Later, strumming their ukeleles this time and accompanied on the auto-harp by their dear friend Padre Pike, a 77-year-old ex-Canadian Navy chaplain who lives at Shawnigan, the kids made a very professional recording of Whales Have Tails, It's a Small World, and The Time to be Happy.

I don't think they could believe it when they heard themselves played back. And they were really thrilled when the naturalist told them that no longer would his whale slide shows be held in silence — that their songs would be used as background music.

And they were delighted when he said he'd learn the words of the whale song so he could teach other groups of youngsters to sing it around the campfires, and so the message would be spread.

max low

I can tell you, they left there one hell of a happy group of kids. That recording session ("Now you know what the Bachman Turner Overdrive fell like," Mrs. Latimer told them) was an extra, a bonus on a trip that I'm sure could not be beaten as a learning experience.

It is an experience, too, that is being made available to more and more students all the time.

"We get about four school groups a week right now," Bennett told me. "Mainly they are from Vancouver Island but some come from much farther afield.

This weekend, for example, there'll be a school from Toronto seeing the Long Beach section of the Pacific Rim National Park and next week we'll have a school group from Calgary here."

Taking groups of kids — and adults — on walks along the beach, through the rain forest and clambering over the rocks exploring the life in tidal pools, is only part of the naturalists' job. The rest of it includes keeping an extensive parks library of files and books, planning parks programs and writing pamphlets.

"Our part is not so much just being a teacher and showing them what's what," Jim explained. "Anyone can do that. We try to stimulate them and make them aware that there is a lot more to see, a lot more to enjoy.

"It's a really good experience for them because most people come from the city and they don't know how to experience the outdoors any more."

As far as the kids from Elsie Miles School were concerned, it truly was an experience to cherish.

As well as all the outings arranged for them, each packed his and here gear almost a mile up and down the steep, winding trail from the roadway to the new Schooner Campground, built just off the beach for tenters. And they must have run or walked miles and miles along the beach.

After four days of it, when it was time to go home, they left, a little weary perhaps but still excited by the adventure and, above all — happy. And they took with them the little song Padre Pike taught them:

The time to be happy is now,
The place to be happy is here;
And the way to be happy is to make others happy,

Breathalysers Err, Expert Tells Court

A local pathologist said in Victoria provincial court Friday that even under optimum conditions the machine which tests the breath of drinkers has a 15 per cent margin of error.

Dr. Kenneth Thornton, pathologist at Royal Jubilee Hospital and former president of the B.C. Association of Pathologists, was called as a defence witness in the case of Alan MacMinn, charged Feb. 19 with having a blood-alcohol reading over .08.

Judge Harold Alder later acquitted MacMinn.

Thornton said that under the best possible conditions a Borkestein 900 model of machine which tests breath samples can be 5 per cent high or low in measuring blood alcohol.

In the case beforee the court there were three factors which made readings of .16 and .15 obtained "completely invalidated," he said.

The potassium dichromate, used in the machine as an oxidizing agent which absorbs alcohol and changes color, had not been replaced in 18 months. He said he would change the solution at least every month and later testified "it might become useless" at six months.

The mouthpiece of the machine was not changed between the first and second samples of breath, with the possibility the second sample was contaminated by contents of the first, court was told.

And there was the possibility of an abortive sample of breath taken because of previous testimony to "huffing and puffing" by MacMinn during the breath tests.

While the measurements may be acceptable "in the real world of the police station," Thornton said they were "scientifically useless."

Use of the breath machine is based on the assumption everyone excretes alcohol at the same rate but the doctor said recent research has shown this is not so. The rate can vary by as much as 30% per cent.

Crown counsel N. K. Varma asked Judge Alder for an opportunity to consult with experts but defence lawyer Dermond Owen-Flood argued the Crown's case was closed and rebuttal evidence could only be allowed if the Crown was "taken by surprise."

Alder ruled in MacMinn's favor, saying the Crown should have anticipated the scientific testimony.

In acquitting MacMinn, the judge said not everything was done in the breath-testing according to procedure and he found it "very unsafe to bring in a conviction."

U-Pick? It's Berry Good Deal

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

U-Pick.

It may have a Madison Avenue ring to it but it's become a way of life for berry and crop farmers on the Saanich Peninsula.

Even farmers of the old school welcome the practice of allowing people on their acreage to pick their own berries and vegetables.

Take Dixon Holloway of 7068 East Saanich Road, as an example. He's president of the Saanich Fruit Growers' Association, a position he has held "on and off for 10 to 12 years."

"It saves the cost of packaging . . . some labor, not the full whack . . . and gives a little more profit . . . and a little more socializing," he says.

Holloway first started a U-Pick system on his farm 20 years ago when he couldn't get the price he wanted for a crop of tomatoes.

"U-Pick went over real good," he reports.

He now has an even split on sales — 50 per cent through U-Pick and roadside stands and the remainder, through wholesalers.

Holloway is a second-generation farmer — his father, the late Philip Holloway started to clear 100 acres in 1904.

"He cleared with blood, sweat and tears. From the time I was 14-years-old I could handle explosives and blowing up (tree) stumps and the team of horses to pull the stumps out afterwards," Holloway asserts.

Who are the U-Pickers who help cut costs for the farmers?

Holloway says 60 per cent of those who come to his farm are older people, probably retired, and 40 per cent are young people, often with families:

But he also employs commercial pickers, about 12 to 15 a day, four days a week.

"I hire all local Indians. They're quick and thorough and they never let you down," he explains.

When the Times visited the Holloway Farm U-Picking was over for the day so we, on Holloway's suggestion, visited the farms along Oldfield Road.

It was knock-off time at 6373 Oldfield, the farm of Albert and May McCarthy.

Mrs. McCarthy said they had been using the U-Pick system for "30 to 40 years" because "there's only so much two persons can do."

We watched as three U-Pickers made their way up from the three-acre strawberry patch and had their pickings weighed.

One of them, Joyce Lebold, 149 West Burnside, paid for the 27 pounds she'd picked, saying she'd eat some now, some she'd freeze and make jam with the remainder.

She's an old hand at picking berries.

"When I was a kid I used to pick loganberries at three cents a pound," she says laughingly.

She and her friend agreed U-Pick is a great way to go shopping and exercise in the fresh air at the same time.

For rookies at the U-Pick practice the provincial agriculture department has brought out a free booklet and map, listing 26 farms on the peninsula using the U-Pick system.

They can be had by writing the B.C. Ministry of Agriculture, Horticulture Branch, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B.C. V8W 227 or by phoning 387-5121, local 237 or 238.

Take it from Lebold, "You know what you're getting and how old they are."

U-Pick is also a great way to beat inflation.

Answers Sought In Sewage Cases

If a Sooke man can be prosecuted and jailed for ignoring an order to repair his septic tank then why aren't others who have received similar orders?

Frank Heinrich, president of a Metchosin-Colwood anti-pollution group aims to find out.

In an interview, Heinrich said he will take the matter up with the regional health board.

He's upset the board prosecuted Kjartan Oscar Gislason yet has taken no action against 16 residents in an Esquimalt Lagoon subdivision who received orders more than a year ago to fix up leaking septic tanks.

Gislason, 54, was sentenced May 27 to seven days in jail for failing to comply with a sewage disposal regulation requiring him to fix a sewage leak on property he owns at 1676 and 1682 Whiffin Spit. He had been ordered to make the repairs last Dec. 6.

"If a person is made to correct a problem in Sooke," said Heinrich, "then why aren't others forced to do the same thing in Metchosin?"

He said the 16 Lagoon residents were ordered March 24, 1976 to repair leaking septic tanks and given two months to complete the job.

But nothing has been done, he said.

PIZZA MUNCH-IN BRINGS IN CASH

A half ton of pizza baked up by the senior cooking class at Dunsmuir Secondary School Friday netted students a tidy profit but just how big won't be known until Monday.

School principal Harold Parrott said today when he left the school at 4 p.m. slices of the monster pizza — which students claim was the world's largest-ever — were selling like hot cakes.

More than $200 in sales — the equivalent of 800 slices — had been made, he said.

And the pizza-lovers had only consumed the outer edge of the 746-square foot whopper.

"They were inching their way towards the centre when I decided to go home," he said.

Students invested only $100 in the project — to purchase 1,000 pounds of charcoal. All of the ingredients, which would have cost $2,700 at the super market, were donated.

The money raised will go towards buying equipment for the school's Home Economics lab.

The students hope to have their achievement entered in the Guiness Book of Records.

The previous record was a pizza, cooked in southern United States, which measured 26 feet 3½ inches for an area of about 570 square feet.

Rain-Soaked Queen at Trooping the Color

LONDON (AP) — Her long blue skirt soaked with rain and her curls soggy with droplets, the Queen sat impassive atop her horse today as loyal subjects huddled under umbrellas to watch the review of royal troops at her official birthday pageant.

The trooping the color was London's third major spectacle in a week of silver jubilee celebrations marking the Queen's 25 years on the throne. It also was the third time the elaborately orchestrated festivities were drenched by unpredictable downpours in a chilly June. But thousands of tourists, Londoners and Britons from throughout the country surged into the heart of the city to cheer.

The Queen wore the scarlet jacket and gold braid of a colonel-in-chief of the Scots Guards as she rode sidesaddle down the half-mile boulevard—The Mall— stretching from Buckingham Palace to Horse Guards Parade opposite St. James's Park.

She was preceded down The Mall by Princess Margaret, the Queen Mother, Princess Anne and her husband Capt. Mark Phillips, who rode in open carriages as drums and trumpets heralded the Queen's approach.

Following behind the Queen on horseback and resplendent in scarlet jackets, gold braid, medals and bearskin hats, were Prince Philip, her son and heir Prince Charles, the Duke of Kent and 77-year-old Earl Mountbatten of Burma.

Flag-waving crowds stood 20 deep along the curbs to get a glimpse of the 51-year-old Queen, for many only a tiny bobbing figure in red, with a black cockade in her hat, as she rode past in the distance.

Mothers and fathers who arrived several hours before the ceremony but still found themselves at the back of the human barrier, passed children up to the curb where those with front-row standing positions became instant and good-natured foster parents during the festivities.

Political leaders and diplomats in London to attend the Commonwealth conference arrived in limousines to join hundreds of other ticket-holders seated on board bleachers with an unobstructed view of the parade ground. Side tiers were packed with onlookers who ordered tickets months in advance or else bought the few available at the last minute from scalpers asking up to $170 each.

Ladies were decked out as if for an Easter parade. Elaborate hats festooned with feathers, flowers, silk net and even miniature fruit wilted during the showers. But gentlemen in top hats and morning-coat tails all seemed to carry umbrellas, and when the scudding clouds let loose the bumpershoots sprang open in one giant gesture.

HUMANITARIAN WAR RULES SET

GENEVA (AP) — Ninety-seven countries and three liberation movements signed a document Friday completing four years of work on how to improve humanitarian rules of warfare.

Israel, protesting inclusion of the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO), refused to sign.

The document is a covering letter to go with two protocols adopted by the conference to update existing Geneva and Hague pacts.

The protocols are still subject to ratification by the parliaments or governing bodies of the individual nations.

Included are about 130 articles designed to gain better protection for civilians and sick, wounded or captured soldiers. They would require changes in military manuals of all countries that ratify them.

Key articles of the first protocol on international wars ban as war crimes strategic target bombings of cities, other "indiscriminate attacks," and destruction of dams and dikes. They also bar the bombing of nuclear power plants, offer immunity to medical aircraft, and grant captured guerillas prisoner-of-war status under certain conditions.

Gales Didn't Dampen Crew's Jubilation

Three Victoria counterparts of Don Quixote in the sailing scene set out to race in the 536-mile west coast race to Triangle Island and back a week today.

One had been sailing six months, another for three months and the third man was getting his first taste in the ocean-tester.

But unlike novelist Miguel de Cervantes' character, who tilted at windmills and at sheep which became armies in his mind, the three Victorians found the sea leaves nothing to the imagination.

The three men are Ron Morrison, of 1083 Redfern, Clarence Sinclair, of 1516 Camosun and Don Clark, of 1882 Duncan.

Morrison's 30-foot tall-rigged sloop Bebelle was one of five boats that started, of which only two finished — Dan Hughes' Maranda of the Royal Naval Sailing Association in Vancouver and Bill Gardner's Lucy Alice of Seattle.

Bebelle returned to the Inner Harbor on Thursday, her soaked cabin witness to the pounding she'd received. Her bearded crew, however, were exultant.

Although they hadn't been able to finish they'd experienced more live adventure than Don Quixote could have dreamed of.

Morrison told of the rations on which they'd sailed — made basic because they couldn't use the propane stove. It had sprung a leak. They'd satisfied stomach cravings with raw steak, marinated in wine; raw vegetables and cold canned food.

Salt water had got into the water tank so they quenched their thirst with beer.

Bebelle lost her RDF (radio direction finder) the second day out, during a gale which threw the set to the cabin deck. From then on they had to rely on land fixes.

"When the second gale came on we started taking water," Morrison said. "Then the depth sounder shorted out."

Morrison said the Canadian coast guard were "superb all the way, especially Tofino."

Knowing Bebelle was without RDF, the coast guard kept them informed of fishboats in the area that could help them fix their position.

Then the radio went and Bebelle could not receive.

Finally she reached Triangle Island in the teeth of a gale at night.

Clark on his first sailing trip told how they headed out to sea for 30 miles or so twice, only to fail to round the island on the inward leg.

"With no depth sounder or RDF we had to keep coming about and going out. But when we got close to shore we kept being nailed by the waves, some of them breaking 15 feet up the mast," Morrison said.

Morrison said he made the decision to drop out of the race when he realized that the gale-force winds were driving them further and further back on each rounding attempt.

The Spanish Don Quixote became a pathetic figure when, after his roamings, he finally faced himself . . . and reality.

ITU Ratifies Thomson Pact

KELOWNA (CP) — Members of the International Typographers Union have ratified a new one-year contract with five Thomson-owned newspapers in British Columbia.

The agreement is retroactive to December 6, 1976, and is within anti-inflation guidelines of eight per cent, or 55 cents over one year, bringing the present hourly wage of $7.08 to $7.63.

The 60 members affected are employed at Kamloops Sentinel, Vernon News, Kelowna Courier, Penticton Herald and Nanaimo Free Press.

Donation Despite Protest

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Devonian Group will donate $900,000 to the city for the widening of the Stanley Park seawall for a pedestrian-bicycle path, despite protests from one of the city's alderman.

Al. Warnett Kennedy, in a telegram to the Calgary-based charity earlier this week, urged that the grant be postponed until a public meeting is held. He said he did not believe the project should go ahead until the public had a chance to express its views.

Council had voted 4-3 in favor of the project.

H. W. Meach, president of the Devonian group, said Thursday the grant would not be postponed.

Meach said the group, established in the 1950s with an endowment of $50 million, funds projects across Canada involving public parks, applied scientific research and historic preservation.

ECM Producion

BRUSSELS (AP) — Industrial production in the common market in March dropped 1.02 per cent from February, official figures showed Friday. In February, it had dropped 0.98 per cent from January. The year-to-year March production was up 5.4 per cent. In February it was up 6 per cent.

Rosalyn Carter Ends Latin Tour

CARACAS, Venezuela — Rosalynn Carter has arrived in Venezuela, the final stop of her seven-nation Latin American tour, where she is discussing the problems of underdeveloped countries with President Carlos Andres Perez. She arrived Friday from Colombia, where she talked with President Alfonso Lopez Michelsen about ways of halting Colombian drug traffickers who smuggle an estimated $500 million worth of drugs a year into the United states.

Venezuela's first lady, Blanquita Rodriguez de Perez, and Foreign Minister Ramon Escovar Salom greeted Mrs. Carter at the airport. Mrs. Carter returns to the United States Sunday.

Rolls Goes to Zsa Zsa But It's All in Pieces

LOS ANGELES — A judge ordered Zsa Zsa Gabor's ex-husband Jack Ryan Friday to return to her the parts he stripped from her Rolls-Royce. Ryan, inventor of the Barbie Doll, dismantled the car shortly before they divorced because he said they had agreed to divide the proceeds of the restored car. He took five wheels, five tires, the front bumper and five wheel covers — about $7,500 worth of parts.

TORONTO — Contralto Maureen Forrester sang after receiving her honorary doctorate of music at the University of Toronto on Thursday and was given a standing ovation. Miss Forrester was described by Prof. Ezra Schabas as the finest living contralto and what one looks and hopes for in a performing musician.

LOS ANGELES — ABC ordered Charlie's Angels to halt production Friday pending resolution of the producer's lawsuit against Farrah Fawcett-Majors, and a spokesman for the network said it may also file suit against the actress. Spelling-Goldberg Productions shut down production as it was completing the first episode for the fall season without Miss Fawcett-Majors.

VALENCIA, Calif. — If you think marriage doesn't have its ups and downs, consider the wedding of David Baysinger and Linda Crane. The two 29-year-olds, describing themselves as "rollercoaster freaks," were married Thursday while riding the rollercoaster at Magic Mountain. They were pronounced man and wife as they hurtled along upside down at the top of the ride's 360-degree loop.

NEW YORK — A gold replica of the Ten Commandments, mounted in amethyst, was awarded to Elizabeth Taylor on Thursday by the B'nai B'rith Anti-Defamation League women's division for her "identification with all peoples and their struggles." "I care about people," the film star said in accepting the Rita V. Tishman human relations award at a star-studded luncheon. "When you do care, you do something about it — that's what makes life worth living."

TIPTOED AWAY

ORLANDO, Fla. — Tiny Tim says he wasn't missing, he was just being discreet.

But the singer, known for this falsetto rendition of Tiptoe Through the Tulips, admitted Friday he did "tiptoe out of Honolulu fast."

His hosts were on their honeymoon, and Tiny Tim said he wanted to leave them alone.

"I couldn't take all my stuff with me, so I packed everything in one shopping bag and got out," he said.

MR. EXCITEMENT NOW FORGOTTEN

MEDFORD, N.J. — Singer Jackie Wilson, once billed as Mr. Excitement for his flashy style and high-geared performances, now lies bedridden in a convalescent home, unable to speak or to feed himself.

Wilson, a top artist for nearly two decades, marked his 43rd birthday Thursday at the Medford Leas Retirement Community, nursing home here.

He receive six birthday cards.

Wilson, whose hit songs include Lonely Teardrops, Higher and Higher, and To Be Loved, suffered a heart attack as well as brain damage when he collapsed on a nightclub stage 21 months ago and lapsed into a coma.

Since then, he has been in three hospitals and three nursing homes or convalescent centres.

He undergoes rigorous physical therapy for several hours each day. The official prognosis is uncertain.
